Swine flu inoculations get high county priority

BENTON — Swine flu innoculation has been given highest priority for health departments in an administrative directive issued by Herbert Domke, director of Missouri Division of Health.

Warren Manning, administrator, told board members of the Scott County Health Department that directive status innoculations should be started simultaneously by private and public clinics.

The director said serum for the innoculations would not be available until the end of September.

The board asked about liability insurance coverage for those persons administering the shots. Manning quoted a figure of $1.65 reportedly issued by insurance companies as the premium cost for each innoculation. This means it would cost $61,250 for liability insurance premiums to innoculate Scott County residents.

He said there would be an update meeting of public health nurses and administrators July 2, in Poplar Bluff to discuss treatment procedures.

The board Manning to see what support the state and federal health agencies would provide for liability.

In other business, Manning said inspections of grocery stores will be conducted throughout the county during the month of July. "The inspection", he said, will be of general sanitation, meat department areas, and refrigeration units."

Also, he reported that two applications had been received for the position of parttime nurse in the northern part of the county. the nurse would work four days a month at the clinic and also be available as a relief nurse. Manning said Susan Dirnberger of Benton, a licensed practical nurse, would be hired as the parttime nurse in northern Scott County.

MAYBE BEING "SMALL" KEEPS YOU HONEST

Senator Jesse Helms offered some thought- provoking comments last month (May) in a communication to his constituents in North Carolina concerning the news media.

Said he: "I talked the other day with a prominent Washington correspondent who expressed great concern at what he described as the growing emphasis on 'advocacy journalism.' As he put it: 'Objective news reporting is almost a relic of a bygone era. Too many people in the business are no longer content with reporting the news; they want to tell the American people what to think, instead of setting forth the facts and letting the people make up their own minds.'

"I suspect that he may be correct — certainly insofar as the major news media of the country are concerned. Very often, the major television networks can be found operating almost in unison, twisting the emphasis on a news event, emphasizing one side of an issue while ignoring the other. The same is true with many big-city newspapers.

"The smaller newspapers and local broadcasters seldom fall into that format. They make an honest effort to give both sides, limiting their personal views to their editorials."

Senator Helms might have added that one factor today is that many schools of journalism teach and promote "advocacy journalism" and that one of the problems faced by the smaller newspapers is that of re-training new employees just out of school to keep their stuff honest.

As we see it, Senator Helms' Washington correspondent friend is not only right, but he has paid a long-overdue compliment to the "small" grass- roots newspapers.

The unanswered question is: Why have journalism schools developed such a distrust for the common sense of the people? Or, why do big city journalists feel they have to guide the public instead of informing them?

PROFOUND FORCE OF AMERICAN EXAMPLE

That is the realization that America's immense importance in history, at least for the greater part of the past 200 years of history, has been due not to its vast size or natural resources or military might alone but also to its moral example.

The truth is brought home anew by an article, "Contemporary Austrian Views of American Independence," published by that country's information service.

Liberal thinkers all over Europe hailed the Declaration of Independence, it recounts, and that of the later French Declaration of the Rights of Man, which the American document inspired. The reception by statesmen and monarchs, however, was somewhat less enthusiastic.

European rulers of the day perceived the Declaration of Independence and the subsequent U.S. Constitution to be frontal attacks on the "correct" political order and feared they would set a dangerous precedent.

A Vienna newspaper warned that the "dangerous, explosive" American ideals could upset "the proper relations between princes and their subjects and lead to disaster."

Such fears were well-founded. The American contagion was to spread throughout Europe and Latin America and inspire a host of independence movements and democratic governments, not all of which were to survive.

The important point is that at no time did the United States send agents abroad to stir up popular unrest or influence the politics of other countries. There was no counterpart to the Communist Comintern designed to foster the spread of a particular ideology.

There was no need to. Just the example of America, the simple fact of its existence, was enough to alter the course of history.

Americans in 1976 might well ponder how far we have departed from our forefathers' trust in the inherent strength and rightness of our political foundations. Our example, whether for good or bad, is still capable of exerting profound influence on the rest of the world.

VERITABLE GREENHOUSE AT THE CITY DUMP

Vegetables grown in urban greenhouses heated by fuel derived from urban wastes could help alleviate the financial, unemployment and wlefare problems of our cities, as well as make a dent in the energy crisis.

So says an organization called Research-Resource of Canton, Ohio, which has to be the world's smallest "think tank."

R-R at the present time is the husband and wife team of Frank and Carol Breckbill, who believe that "we, the people" must start solving more of our own problems rather than letting big government or big business do it all.

A hundred tons of garbage a day, most of it burnable, is now going to the Canton city landfill, they note. Instead, it could be delivered to air-tight pits or silos, where methane gas and compost could be generated for use in greenhouses. A new industry could be created, with people learning how to plan, harvest and perhaps package and retail vegetables.

The idea is not entirely new, says R-R. A several-hundred-acre greenhouse complex on the edge of Leningrad, USSR, supplies nearly 75 per cent of the vegetable needs of the city's 4.5 million inhabitants.

Vegetable growers would not need to fear competition from urban greenhouses. R-R also notes that cellulose—plant material—can be converted by bacterial action directly into clean-burning alcohol as a supplemental fuel for internal combustion engines. City vegetable farming could release hundreds of acres for new, intensive vegetation growth for both alcohol and methane conversion.

With a little planning, a whole new urban Garden of Eden could be just around the technological corner, says R-R: fruit trees under grass, rice paddies, maybe even exotics like bananas and oranges.

The Breckbills invite comment and criticism regarding their idea. "Perhaps through more of us cooperating," they hope, "we can find nature's ongoing, replenishable energies and fit them into our nation's needs to keep and maintain a good and viable, long-lasting standard of living, while our fossil and mineral energies dwindle to a memroy."

Even our poorest need not despair, for the American ladder of success is blind to social status, race, creed or sex--all kinds of people have managed to scale it, and many more will before the last chapter of U.S. history is written. The freedom for each individual to fulfill his potential is there. All it takes is determination and a willingness to work.

DROPPING OUT OF MOTHERHOOD

Copley News Service

Like most college graduates, I receive a magazine sent regularly with the compliments of my alma mater. The current issue of the Radcliffe Quarterly presents statistics which show that whereas all young women are having fewer children, four-year-college women graduates are having still fewer, and Radcliffe College graduates are having the least of all. Radcliffe is the women's college of Harvard University and shares equally in its academic prestige.

According to the latest U. S. Census Bureau report, 17 per cent of married women between the ages of 25 and 29 are childless.

But 86 per cent of the graduates of Radcliffe College in that same age group who are married are childless. The author suggests that we address ourselves to the consequences of the sociological phenomenon that the best-educated women are dropping out of motherhood at a landslide rate and are not reproducing themselves.

Educators are already facing the problem of declining school enrollments. In the last five years, the enrollment in our country's elementary and high schools has dropped by a million and a half. This decline will continue for the next decade.

At various teacher and administrative conventions this year, the new watchword has been "RIF." That stands for "reduction in force" – quite a shock for educators who, only a few years ago, were enthusiastically building schools and increasing staffs.

Many schools are facing the grim prospect of dismissing even tenured teachers, and are already discussing whether the layoffs should be by seniority or by quota or by ability.

The unprecedented drop in births will ultimately have a disastrous effect on Social Security, whose fiscal solvency is based precariously on having more young workers who pay into the system than senior citizens who draw out benefits. Last year. for the first time, more was paid out in Social Security benefits than was taken in. "1984," a year which has had special meaning in our language ever since George Orwell's book with that title, has now been targeted by Social Security trustees as the year when Social Security reserves will be completely depleted.

A new Census Bueeau study shows that America's elderly population has almost doubled in the last quarter of a century, and will probably double again by the end of this century. By the year 2020, there will be almost 43 million senior citizens in the United States. Jacob Siegel, a senior Census Bureau statistician, calls this "one of the most important demographic issues of our time."

Many causes are advanced for the plummeting of birth rates: the million abortions that take place every year, the widespread use of the pill, the large influx of women into the labor force, the women's studies courses in the colleges that encourage young women to choose paying jobs instead of a career as wife and mother in the home, and the general disillusionment with what happens to children who grow up in the present school and community environment.

Several years ago, the lecture halls and the talk shows rang with alarms about an alleged "population bomb." We were told that we faced a population explosion that would lower the quality of life. The quality of American life is indeed lowered, but not because of too many people. Crime and taxes are up. Inflation has robbed our money of its former buying power, and wage increases simply put us in a higher income tax bracket without giving any increase in real income.

These problems, we hope, can be remedied with changes in policies. But if we become a nation of old people instead of productive young workers, the long-term decline in our living standards will be irreversible.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Ford's Pardon Of Nixon

By Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — A harried but stubborn Richard Nixon was headed in September 1974 for the trial of the century.

Sources inside the Special Prosecutor's office have told us that he definitely would have been indicted for obstruction of justice.

At the same time, sources close to the former President have told us that he would never have agreed to a deal with the prosecutors. He would have spurned plea bargaining and would have fought for his freedom in the courts.

This epic drama was aborted on Sept. 8, 1974, when President Ford granted his predecessor a pardon. Millions of Americans still wonder whether it was a set-up, whether Ford in return for his vice presidential appointment had promised to keep Nixon out of prison.

In response to literally thousands of requests, we have conducted a painstaking investigation into the circumstances that led to the controversial Nixon pardon. We have uncovered some fascinating details that can now be revealed for the first time.

Gen. Alexander Haig, then the White House staff chief, first raised the question of a pardon with Gerald Ford on August 5 -- four days before Ford replaced Nixon in the White House.

Haig notified Ford to be prepared to assume the presidency. In discussing several possible contingencies, Haig mentioned that Nixon could pardon himself before resigning or might be granted a pardon after he resigned. Ford gave no inclination what he might do.

But thereafter, Ford noticed for the first time, he later confided, that Nixon looked drawn and defeated. He also appeared to have lost weight.

Gerald Ford took the oath as President on August 9. Not until August 27, so far as we can learn, was the subject of the pardon raised with him again. Then aides Jerry terHorst and Robert Hartmann alerted him to expect questions about it at a press conference the following day.

Immediately after the press conference, the President instructed his general counsel, Philip Buchen, to explore the possibilities of a pardon. We are privy to the backroom discussions, which are too detailed to relate.

But shortly after Labor Day, Buchen approached Nixon's attorney, Herbert J. Miller, about the possibility of a pardon. Buchen strongly suggested that Nixon should issue a statement of contrition. But this was not a condition, Buchen added carefully, to the pardon.

Privately, the White House wanted a statement that would keep Nixon from proclaiming his innocence once it was no longer possible for the courts to establish his guilt. Miller agreed to seek such a statement from his San Clemente client.

The President sent a close friend, Washington attorney Benton Becker, to San Clemente to make the arrangements. Benton and Miller flew to California together. Although they didn't reach San Clemente until 11 p.m., Pacific time, they went immediately into a three-hour huddle with Nixon aide Ronald Ziegler.

The talks were resumed the following morning in Ziegler's office. Frequently, Ziegler and Miller would slip out of the room for whispered consultations. At one point, Ziegler received a call from the White House. It was Haig on the phone, advising Ziegler that Nixon didn't have to sign any statement at all.

An understanding was reached, nevertheless, that any pardon would be followed by a statement of contrition from San Clemente. Not until the negotiations were completed did a fatigued, forlorn Nixon appear. He looked aged as if he were not Nixon but Nixon's father, Becker recalled. The former President also gave Becker the impression that his head was too big for his body.

He was despondent, disoriented. "Thank you for being fair," he murmured. "You are a fine young man." Then in the middle of the conversation, he grabbed Becker's arm. "You are a big boy," Nixon blurted out of context. "Did you ever play football?"

Later, as Becker was leaving, Ziegler intercepted him and said the deposed President wanted to see him again. Becker was ushered into a sparse office. Nixon greeted him solemnly.

"Mr. Becker," he said, "you have been a gentleman. You haven't been a bully. I have had my share of bullies. I want to give you something." Then he extended both arms toward the sparse office walls. "But I don't have anything," he said, his voice almost breaking. "They took it all away."

Swallowing hard, Nixon pulled open a desk drawer and produced a pair of cheap, presidential cuff links and a tiepin. He handed these dramatically to Becker. "Pat took these from my jewelry box," said Nixon sadly. "Hang on to them. They are the last ones in the world."

Back in Washington, President Ford had already made his decision to grant the pardon. He instructed Hartmann to draft an announcement. Hartmann warned that the decision would cause an uproar. The President said he had already made up his mind. He didn't want Hartmann's opinion, just the statement.

Benton Becker, back from San Clemente, consulted with the President on September 7. Ford asked how Nixon had looked. Becker gave a disturbing report. Afterward, the President personally added to his statement, as another reason for the pardon, "the threat to (Nixon's) health."

Sources close to both Ford and Nixon have assured us that the two men never spoke to one another about the pardon. The President told his subordinates emphatically that there had been "no deal, period." A source intimately familiar with Nixon's side of the story said he was "99 per cent certain there had been no advance agreement."

Bloody Brothers:

How Tony Pro's teamsters' opponents disappeared one by one by one

NEW YORK— Strange things happen to some of the strong men to whom tough Anthony (Tony Pro) Provenzano, a powerful Teamster official, develops a personality allergy. They disappear. The FBI digs for them. Mostly in New Jersey, Mr. Provenzano's home state when he's not winter watering in and around his $250,000 Hallandale, Fla., home.

Or they get three slugs in the back; as did the gutsy, 200-pound, six-foot, ex-Marine, then 29-year-old Walter Glockner. That was back on May 24, 1963. The previous evening he had been thrown out of a Teamsters Local 560 shop stewards' meeting. He had broken the basic rules of order. He had defied Tony Pro's crowd.

And Mr. Provenzano was president then not only of the huge local but of the big all-powerful New Jersey statewide District Council 73.

After being ejected Glockner went to a caucus of the anti-Provenzano United Party. Glockner said he'd always oppose the big man and "they're going to have to put me in a pine box to stop me."

Well, someone did. The next morning. Three shots in his broad back.

As for those union brethren who disappeared -- two of them went by names of James Riddle Hoffa and Anthony (Three Finger Tony) Castellito. Coincidences never will cease.

Castellitto was dropped out of sight back in early June 1961. He went to a Local 560 meeting. He was the union's secretary-treasurer than. Very popular. Buddy-buddy with Tony Pro, who was slightly on edge since he fell down an elevator shaft. Maybe he was pushed, who knows? And "Pro-' suspected the secretary-treasurer was preparing to buck him.

After all, Castellito was a big man in town with a record going back to what they tell me were Prohibition days. And he had a brown Cadillac to match. So he gets into it -- and never shows again. But soon the post is filled. And Tony Pro's newest buddy, Sal Briguglio, suddenly becomes a Local 560 business agent, as Tony Pro had promised.

Years later when Jimmy Hoffa, whom Tony Pro got to loathe when they were both in the Lewisburg, Pa., penitentiary protected cell-block, vanished, Mr. Briguglio was questioned by all sorts of FBI agents, grand juries, strike force attorneys and a goodly chunk of Miciggan's law and order forces.

Well, back to Castellito. Apparently he was slaughtered on June 5, 1961, up near Ellenville, N.Y., an old Murder, Inc., dumping grounds in the Brooklyn mob's halcyon days. Then he was dragged to an open grave. The killers changed their minds. Castellito's cadaver was rushed back to New Jersey for more traditional burial on home grounds (like a swamp, or flowing concrete).

And the other day the dedicated William Irving Aronwald, the attorney directing the Justice Department's famed anti-racketeering joint strike force here, charged Mr. Provenzano, along with three others, with participation in the kidnap-murder of Brother Castellito.

Note, please, that the defendants are innocent until proven guilty. Note, too, that crusade Aronwald is a methodical, tight-lipped investigator. The grand jury to which he presented his evidence charges that ex-convict tough Tony Pro, now Local 560's boss though only the union secretary-treasurer, "arranged with the defendents Salvatore Briguglio and Harold Konigsbery to have Castellito murdered."

According to the grand jury, Castellito was killed on or about June 5, 1961. About that time Tony Pro officially was earning about $51,888 annually in salary, allowances, expenses, etc. In December of 1962 "Pro" was voted a $25,000-a-year pay raise at a union meeting attended by less than 2 per cent of the local's membership. Early in 1963 they awarded him another raise, hail fellow, of $50,000 yearly.

This made him the world's highest paid labor leader then. His total came to well over $125,000. He even topped the President of the U.S. Jack Kennedy's annual salary was $100,000.

But Tony Pro had eyes to the future. He put his wages into escrow. Later when in prison for extortion he began drawing some $25,000 annually.

Apparently, Briguglio lived more modestly. It took him until 1974 to draw $25,102 a year officially. This must have gotten to him. What with cost of living going up and up. He did time in prison in the early '70s for conspiring to counterfeit $250,000. But Local 560 has an avant-garde policy on rehabilitation. Briguglio stepped right back into his former union post.

Now the combination faces a tough kidnap-murder conspiracy charge. And Bill Aronwald is preparing , of course, to prove his case. He has what he believes to be a viable witness who has turned state's evidence.

This isn't a local murder case. It isn't even a teamsters unbrotherhood story. It's the saga of tough men, who can control billions of dollars of American transportation crossing a critical freight bottleneck state, and who appear to believe they are the world and the rest of citizenry simply have their damned nerve interfering with the "second government," as Sen. McClellan used to call the musclehood.

MAYBE BEING "SMALL" KEEPS YOU HONEST

Senator Jesse Helms offered some thought- provoking comments last month (May) in a communication to his constituents in North Carolina concerning the news media.

Said he: "I talked the other day with a prominent Washington correspondent who expressed great concern at what he described as the growing emphasis on 'advocacy journalism.' As he put it: 'Objective news reporting is almost a relic of a bygone era. Too many people in the business are no longer content with reporting the news; they want to tell the American people what to think, instead of setting forth the facts and letting the people make up their own minds.'

"I suspect that he may be correct — certainly insofar as the major news media of the country are concerned. Very often, the major television networks can be found operating almost in unison, twisting the emphasis on a news event, emphasizing one side of an issue while ignoring the other. The same is true with many big-city newspapers.

"The smaller newspapers and local broadcasters seldom fall into that format. They make an honest effort to give both sides, limiting their personal views to their editorials."

Senator Helms might have added that one factor today is that many schools of journalism teach and promote "advocacy journalism" and that one of the problems faced by the smaller newspapers is that of re-training new employees just out of school to keep their stuff honest.

As we see it, Senator Helms' Washington correspondent friend is not only right, but he has paid a long-overdue compliment to the "small". grass- roots newspapers.

The unanswered question is: Why have journalism schools developed such a distrust for the common sense of the people? Or, why do big city journalists feel they have to guide the public instead of informing them?

PROFOUND FORCE OF AMERICAN EXAMPLE

That is the realization that America's immense importance in history, at least for the greater part of the past 200 years of history, has been due not to its vast size or natural resources or militery might alone but also to its moral example.

The truth is brought home anew by an article, "Contemporary Austrian Views of American Independence," published by that country's information service.

Liberal thinkers all over Europe hailed the Declaration of Independence, it recounts, and that of the later French Declaration of the Rights of Man, which the American document inspired. The reception by statesmen and monarchs, however, was somewhat less enthusiastic.

European rulers of the day perceived the Declaration of Independence and the subsequent U.S. Constitution to be frontal attacks on the "correct" political order and feared they would set a dangerous precedent.

A Vienna newspaper warned that the "dangerous, explosive" American ideals could upset "the proper relations between princes and their subjects and lead to disaster."

Such fears were well-founded. The American contagion was to spread throughout Europe and Latin America and inspire a host of independence movements and democratic governments, not all of which were to survive.

The important point is that at no time did the United States send agents abroad to stir up popular unrest or influence the politics of other countries. There was no counterpart to the Communist Comintern designed to foster the spread of a particular ideology.

There was no need to. Just the example of America, the simple fact of its existence, was enough to alter the course of history.

Americans in 1976 might well ponder how far we have departed from our forefathers' trust in the inherent strength and rightness of our political foundations. Our example, whether for good or bad, is still capable of exerting profound influence on the rest of the world.

VERITABLE GREENHOUSE AT THE CITY DUMP

Vegetables grown in urban greenhouses heated by fuel derived from urban wastes could help alleviate the financial, unemployment and wlefare problems of our cities, as well as make a dent in the energy crisis.

So says an organization called Research-Resource of Canton, Ohio, which has to be the world's smallest "think tank."

R-R at the present time is the husband and wife team of Frank and Carol Breckbill, who believe that "we, the people" must start solving more of our own problems rather than letting big government or big business do it all.

A hundred tons of garbage a day, most of it burnable, is now going to the Canton city landfill, they note. Instead, it could be delivered to air-tight pits or silos, where methane gas and compost could be generated for use in greenhouses. A new industry could be created, with people learning how to plan, harvest and perhaps package and retail vegetables.

The idea is not entirely new, says R-R. A several-hundred-acre greenhouse complex on the edge of Leningrad, USSR, supplies nearly 75 per cent of the vegetable needs of the city's 4.5 million inhabitants.

Vegetable growers would not need to fear competition from urban greenhouses. R-R also notes that cellulose—plant material—can be converted by bacterial action directly into clean-burning alcohol as a supplemental fuel for internal combustion engines. City vegetable farming could release hundreds of acres for new, intensive vegetation growth for both alcohol and methane conversion.

With a little planning, a whole new urban Garden of Eden could be just around the technological corner, says R-R: fruit trees under grass, rice paddies, maybe even exotics like bananas and oranges.

The Breckbills invite comment and criticism regarding their idea. "Perhaps through more of us cooperating," they hope, "we can find nature's ongoing, replenishable energies and fit them into our nation's needs to keep and maintain a good and viable, long-lasting standard of living, while our fossil and mineral energies dwindle to a memroy."

IT'S UP TO YOU

"God gives every bird his food, but He doesn't throw it into the next." This thought, taken from a North Carolina LP Gas Association publication, applies to all of us. Surrounded and pampered by thousands of modern conveniences, the average U.S. family enjoys a standard of living never before attained in the annals of history. Even our poorest need not despair, for the American ladder of success is blind to social status, race, creed or sex--all kinds of people have managed to scale it, and many more will before the last chapter of U.S. history is written. The freedom for each individual to fulfill his potential is there. All it takes is determination and a willingness to work.

MICHIGAN TEEN TURNS GRASS INTO MONEY

Seventeen-year old Jeff Bykerk of Grand Rapids, Mich., is the 1975 winner of The Toro Company's Young Entrepreneur Program. He was awarded a $1,000 scholarship award by David T. McLaughlin, Toro's president.

Runner-up Ross Champion, 18, also from Michigan, received a $250 award.

Toro's Young Entrepreneur Program, which starts its fourth year next spring, provides free training to teenagers to help them organize and operate a lawn-care service business.

This past year, the program was offered in 11 states and helped 300 young men and women to earn money while learning about free enterprise in action. For 1976, Toro will more than double the size of the program, Mr. McLaughlin said, extending it to include 25 states.

Mr. Bykerk started his lawn service in April, after attending three training sessions. By the end of September, he had 35 regular customers and had earned $4,103.40.

Bloody Brothers:

How Tony Pro's teamsters' opponents disappeared one by one by one

NEW YORK— Strange things happen to some of the strong men to whom tough Anthony (Tony Pro) Provenzano, a powerful Teamster official, develops a personality allergy. They disappear. The FBI digs for them. Mostly in New Jersey, Mr. Provenzano's home state when he's not winter watering in and around his $250,000 Hallandale, Fla., home.

Or they get three slugs in the back; as did the gutsy, 200-pound, six-foot, ex-Marine, then 29-year-old Walter Glockner. That was back on May 24, 1963. The previous evening he had been thrown out of a Teamsters Local 560 shop stewards' meeting. He had broken the basic rules of order. He had defied Tony Pro's crowd.

And Mr. Provenzano was president then not only of the huge local but of the big all-powerful New Jersey statewide District Council 73.

After being ejected Glockner went to a caucus of the anti-Provenzano United Party. Glockner said he'd always oppose the big man and "they're going to have to put me in a pine box to stop me."

Well, someone did. The next morning. Three shots in his broad back.

As for those union brethren who disappeared -- two of them went by names of James Riddle Hoffa and Anthony (Three Finger Tony) Castellito. Coincidences never will cease.

Castellitto was dropped out of sight back in early June 1961. He went to a Local 560 meeting. He was the union's secretary-treasurer than. Very popular. Buddy-buddy with Tony Pro, who was slightly on edge since he fell down an elevator shaft. Maybe he was pushed, who knows? And "Pro-' suspected the secretary-treasurer was preparing to buck him.

After all, Castellito was a big man in town with a record going back to what they tell me were Prohibition days. And he had a brown Cadillac to match. So he gets into it -- and never shows again. But soon the post is filled. And Tony Pro's newest buddy, Sal Briguglio, suddenly becomes a Local 560 business agent, as Tony Pro had promised.

Years later when Jimmy Hoffa, whom Tony Pro got to loathe when they were both in the Lewisburg, Pa., penitentiary protected cell-block, vanished, Mr. Briguglio was questioned by all sorts of FBI agents, grand juries, strike force attorneys and a goodly chunk of Miciggan's law and order forces.

Well, back to Castellito. Apparently he was slaughtered on June 5, 1961, up near Ellenville, N.Y., an old Murder, Inc., dumping grounds in the Brooklyn mob's halcyon days. Then he was dragged to an open grave. The killers changed their minds. Castellito's cadaver was rushed back to New Jersey for more traditional burial on home grounds (like a swamp, or flowing concrete).

And the other day the dedicated William Irving Aronwald, the attorney directing the Justice Department's famed anti-racketeering joint strike force here, charged Mr. Provenzano, along with three others, with participation in the kidnap-murder of Brother Castellito.

Note, please, that the defendants are innocent until proven guilty. Note, too, that crusade Aronwald is a methodical, tight-lipped investigator. The grand jury to which he presented his evidence charges that ex-convict tough Tony Pro, now Local 560's boss though only the union secretary-treasurer, "arranged with the defendents Salvatore Briguglio and Harold Konigsbery to have Castellito murdered."

According to the grand jury, Castellito was killed on or about June 5, 1961. About that time Tony Pro officially was earning about $51,888 annually in salary, allowances, expenses, etc. In December of 1962 "Pro" was voted a $25,000-a-year pay raise at a union meeting attended by less than 2 per cent of the local's membership. Early in 1963 they awarded him another raise, hail fellow, of $50,000 yearly.

This made him the world's highest paid labor leader then. His total came to well over $125,000. He even topped the President of the U.S. Jack Kennedy's annual salary was $100,000.

But Tony Pro had eyes to the future. He put his wages into escrow. Later when in prison for extortion he began drawing some $25,000 annually.

Apparently, Briguglio lived more modestly. It took him until 1974 to draw $25,102 a year officially. This must have gotten to him. What with cost of living going up and up. He did time in prison in the early '70s for conspiring to counterfeit $250,000. But Local 560 has an avant-garde policy on rehabilitation. Briguglio stepped right back into his former union post.

Now the combination faces a tough kidnap-murder conspiracy charge. And Bill Aronwald is preparing , of course, to prove his case. He has what he believes to be a viable witness who has turned state's evidence.

This isn't a local murder case. It isn't even a teamsters unbrotherhood story. It's the saga of tough men, who can control billions of dollars of American transportation crossing a critical freight bottleneck state, and who appear to believe they are the world and the rest of citizenry simply have their damned nerve interfering with the "second government," as Sen. McClellan used to call the musclehood.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Ford's Pardon Of Nixon

By Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — A harried but stubborn Richard Nixon was headed in September 1974 for the trial of the century.

Sources inside the Special Prosecutor's office have told us that he definitely would have been indicted for obstruction of justice.

At the same time, sources close to the former President have told us that he would never have agreed to a deal with the prosecutors. He would have spurned plea bargaining and would have fought for his freedom in the courts.

This epic drama was aborted on Sept. 8, 1974, when President Ford granted his predecessor a pardon. Millions of Americans still wonder whether it was a set-up, whether Ford in return for his vice presidential appointment had promised to keep Nixon out of prison.

In response to literally thousands of requests, we have conducted a painstaking investigation into the circumstances that led to the controversial Nixon pardon. We have uncovered some fascinating details that can now be revealed for the first time.

Gen. Alexander Haig, then the White House staff chief, first raised the question of a pardon with Gerald Ford on August 5 -- four days before Ford replaced Nixon in the White House.

Haig notified Ford to be prepared to assume the presidency. In discussing several possible contingencies, Haig mentioned that Nixon could pardon himself before resigning or might be granted a pardon after he resigned. Ford gave no inclination what he might do.

But thereafter, Ford noticed for the first time, he later confided, that Nixon looked drawn and defeated. He also appeared to have lost weight.

Gerald Ford took the oath as President on August 9. Not until August 27, so far as we can learn, was the subject of the pardon raised with him again. Then aides Jerry terHorst and Robert Hartmann alerted him to expect questions about it at a press conference the following day.

Immediately after the press conference, the President instructed his general counsel, Philip Buchen, to explore the possibilities of a pardon. We are privy to the backroom discussions, which are too detailed to relate.

But shortly after Labor Day, Buchen approached Nixon's attorney, Herbert J. Miller, about the possibility of a pardon. Buchen strongly suggested that Nixon should issue a statement of contrition. But this was not a condition, Buchen added carefully, to the pardon.

Privately, the White House wanted a statement that would keep Nixon from proclaiming his innocence once it was no longer possible for the courts to establish his guilt. Miller agreed to seek such a statement from his San Clemente client.

The President sent a close friend, Washington attorney Benton Becker, to San Clemente to make the arrangements. Benton and Miller flew to California together. Although they didn't reach San Clemente until 11 p.m., Pacific time, they went immediately into a three-hour huddle with Nixon aide Ronald Ziegler.

The talks were resumed the following morning in Ziegler's office. Frequently, Ziegler and Miller would slip out of the room for whispered consultations. At one point, Ziegler received a call from the White House. It was Haig on the phone, advising Ziegler that Nixon didn't have to sign any statement at all.

An understanding was reached, nevertheless, that any pardon would be followed by a statement of contrition from San Clemente. Not until the negotiations were completed did a fatigued, forlorn Nixon appear. He looked aged as if he were not Nixon but Nixon's father, Becker recalled. The former President also gave Becker the impression that his head was too big for his body.

He was despondent, disoriented. "Thank you for being fair," he murmured. "You are a fine young man." Then in the middle of the conversation, he grabbed Becker's arm. "You are a big boy," Nixon blurted out of context. "Did you ever play football?"

Later, as Becker was leaving, Ziegler intercepted him and said the deposed President wanted to see him again. Becker was ushered into a sparse office. Nixon greeted him solemnly.

"Mr. Becker," he said, "you have been a gentleman. You haven't been a bully. I have had my share of bullies. I want to give you something." Then he extended both arms toward the sparse office walls. "But I don't have anything," he said, his voice almost breaking. "They took it all away."

Swallowing hard, Nixon pulled open a desk drawer and produced a pair of cheap, presidential cuff links and a tiepin. He handed these dramatically to Becker. "Pat took these from my jewelry box," said Nixon sadly. "Hang on to them. They are the last ones in the world."

Back in Washington, President Ford had already made his decision to grant the pardon. He instructed Hartmann to draft an announcement. Hartmann warned that the decision would cause an uproar. The President said he had already made up his mind. He didn't want Hartmann's opinion, just the statement.

Benton Becker, back from San Clemente, consulted with the President on September 7. Ford asked how Nixon had looked. Becker gave a disturbing report. Afterward, the President personally added to his statement, as another reason for the pardon, "the threat to (Nixon's) health."

Sources close to both Ford and Nixon have assured us that the two men never spoke to one another about the pardon. The President told his subordinates emphatically that there had been "no deal, period." A source intimately familiar with Nixon's side of the story said he was "99 per cent certain there had been no advance agreement."

Special education law initiates programs for the handicapped

By LORI BERGER
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — A special education law passed by the General Assembly in 1973 has halved the number of handiacpped children estimated to be out of school and not receiving the opportunity for an education.

The state education department estimated in 1973 that 35,000 handicapped children in Missouri were not receiving an education because they were either not in school or their schools did not provide the help those students needed.

Now state education officials estimate that 16,000 of those children benefit from 1973 legislation which requires a census of handicapped children and their needs, and encouraged school districts to take steps to provide such children with a suitable education.

Dr. Roland Werner, director of the state special education division said the program has been "highly effective." "It called attention to the fact that handicapped children have the right to an education," he said.

The special education law "has initiated new programs and made more people and teachers aware of the problems these kids face," Werner said.

Under the law each district is required to submit an accurate and complete census of handicapped and suspected-as-handicapped children so the information can be used in appropriation requests to the General Assembly.

Included in the census are the educational services a handicapped child is or is not receiving. Werner said the census has proved to be a useful tool in locating children out of school as well as in finding additional children in need of services.

When the program first began, 193,000 handicapped children were reported on the census. In the last three years the number of handicapped children appearing on the census has increased by 17,000.

If the state education department receives a census indicating a handicapped child in a district is not receiving educational services, the department notifies the district of their failure to provide adequate services.

"The board of a local school district is responsible for providing these services and it's up to the board or superintendent of that district to rectify the situation," Werner said.

He said the district has two options if handicapped children not receiving educational services. Either the district can make arrangements with a neighboring district or it can contract with a non-profit agency in the area that provides the needed services.

"In some circumstances it's difficult to determine if the districts are cooperating with the program," Werner said.

"With the smaller unclassified schools it becomes a problem of economics to send one or two kids out," to an adjacent school, he said. "It's a budget crunch so they try to do the best they can with their available programs."

Of the 569 school districts in the state, 506 districts are receiving state funds for the expansion of their educational programs to handicapped children.

Werner said the 63 school districts that are not receiving state funds are either "currently not providing a special education program for handicapped students or are not cooperating with a district that is providing one."

Each approved class of handicapped children is financed with $6,000 in state funds with two exceptions.

Classes of educable mentally retarded children are funded with $4,500 for each approved class. Each approved class of remedial reading students is funded with $3,500.

"The figures are discriminatory in my opinion," he said, because each program is of equal importance, and appropriations made by the General Assembly should reflect the balance.

Werner said more money was needed to continue to support and expand the programs.

Burlison family robbed

WARDELL, Mo. (AP) — The parents of Rep. Bill D. Burlison, D-Mo., were robbed Monday of about $500 in cash and two diamond rings, the Pemiscot County sheriff's office said.

J. I. Burlison and his wife, Vonita, were listening to a baseball game in their farm home near here in northern Pemiscot County, when two men forced open their front door.

The bandits, both about 20 and armed with pistols, bound the elderly couple with electrical cords and began ransacking the home, according to a granddaughter, Mrs. Jerry Bynum.

Besides the money, the two men took Mrs. Burlison's wedding ring and another diamond ring from Burlison. An electrical power outage forced the robbers to flee before they finished their sack of the house.

Mrs. Burlison managed to free herself, untied her husband and telephoned Mrs. Bynum for help.

The men had been seen in the cars during a shift change by workers at the plant, who gave chase. Simms, who fled on foot and escaped into a field, was apprehended when he came back toward the plant.

One of the radios that has not been recovered belonged to Stanley Grissom of New Madrid and the ownership of the radio that was recovered has not been determined.

The Mike Bolen home, located on Route AA, three miles south of Miner, was burglarized about 10 p.m. Monday.

One 12- gauge shotgun, one .22-caliber rifle, and one 30-30 rifle were reported stolen. Bolen told officers he arrived home and found four white males in his yard, who told him they were getting water to put in their old van.

When they left, Bolen went inside and discovered the guns were missing from a closet. Bolen said the front door had been locked when he left the house. Deputy Sheriff Johnnie Martin said there was no evidence of forced entry.

Vegetarians Get Special Campus Meals

Open since September, the center has 300 students regularly using its facilities and a waiting list of 20, according to John Hansel, director of food services.

Susan Read, student organizer of the program, and several other students met with Hansel to work out the details after determining the extent of student interest in an alternative eating program.

The center was established in Pearsons dining hall because it is the largest dormitory eating facility on campus.

A vegetarian dinner center has not been set up because, according to Hansel, "eating dinner in a student's own dormitory is a tradition at Mount Holyoke. Students eat lunch in one of several different lunch centers around campus, so they're moving around anyway. A vegetarian dinner center would mean displacing students from their own dormitory."

Most students do not object to having vegetarian meals at lunch only, Miss Read said, adding, "We just eat our biggest meal of the day at noon."

Pollution controls sought at Noranda

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Lewis C. Green, a former chairman of the Missouri Air Conservation Commission, appealed to the commission today for strong pollution controls at the Noranda Aluminum Co. plant in New Madrid.

The commission has taken a lenient position on pollution at the plant since the area is relatively free of pollution.

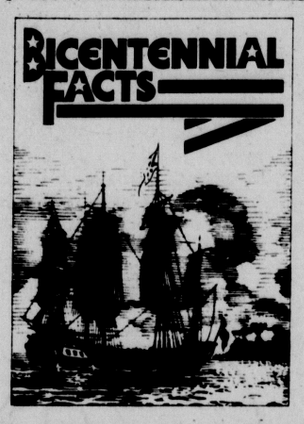
A commission report noted no one has complained of pollution, although the plant's emissions exceed state standards 30 times over.

Green said today Noranda should have to install controls regardless of the quality of surrounding air. He said the company had failed to show installation would cause it any peculiar hardship.

Green said his remarks were endorsed by the only other past chairman, Ames Bogle of East Prairie and that he was also speaking for the St. Louis Coalition for the Environment, the Sierra Club and the St. Louis Audubon Society.

The controls would cost about $9 million but would allow the company to capture and sell aluminum fluoride, thereby offsetting some of the cost.

The plant is about 150 miles south of St. Louis.



The American colonies during the Revolutionary War were geographically similar to present-day Chile — that is, a narrow coastal strip extending 1,000 miles. What would have been a significant British advantage — control of the seas and easy maneuverability toward any rebel concentration — was offset by the lack of any single strategic center of the revolutionary movement to focus on. To win, The World Almanac notes, it would have been necessary for the British to physically control virtually the entire seabord.

Quinlan's condition 'stable'

MORRIS PLAINS, N.J. (AP) — Karen Anne Quinlan couldn't survive without a respirator, said the physicians who testified last fall at her "death with dignity" trial, but five weeks after the machine was disconnected she was still holding her own.

"She remains stable," Stephan Hansbury, assistant administrator of the Morris View Nursing Home, said Tuesday. "There has been no change in her condition."

The comatose Miss Quinlan was transferred to the county-operated facility June 9 from St. Clare's Hospital in nearby Denville, where she was admitted April 15, 1975, suffering from the effects of tranquilizers and liquor.

At the week-long trial last October, physicians described her as contorted, emaciated and in a chronic and vegetative state. One neurologist said she was "too grotesque to be described."

But people who have seen her recently say she looks much like a normal 22-year-old woman except for tubes running into her nose and throat for feeding and removing wastes.

Her parents, Joseph and Julia Quinlan, first asked doctors to disconnect the respirator last July 31 and, when they refused, asked a judge of the Superior Court to order it turned off.

Physicians said at the trial that Miss Quinlan would be unable to breathe for more than a few minutes without the machine, but doctors also agreed that she was not dead by any accepted medical criteria.

Judge Robert Muir denied the family's request, saying, "There is no constitutional right to die that can be asserted by a parent for his incompetent child."

The New Jersey Supreme Court on March 31 disagreed and authorized Joseph Quinlan, as his daughter's guardian, to discontinue medical treatment.

Withdrawal from the machine was gradual, and not until May 23 was she breathing completely on her own.

Little information is available on the current costs of Miss Quinlan's care. Before her transfer to the nursing home, she occupied an intensive care hospital room costing $435 per day.

Medicaid picked up most of that bill, and officials at St. Clare's Hospital said they absorbed the rest. Miss Quinlan's two treating physicans never submitted a bill.

Doctors have said recently that although she may be stronger physically, her prognosis remains unchanged. The front of her brain, which controls "cognitive functions" such as thinking, will never recover, they say.

BEAUTY AND THE BATH

Bathrooms are beautiful these days, there's no question about it! In fact, creating a beautiful bathroom is a snap, no matter what the basic condition or age of the fixtures you have to work with. All it really takes to turn that ugly-duckling bath into a delightful inner sanctum is just a bit of ingenuity and some decorative imagination.

As a room the bath offers limitless potential. It's small enough to experiment with inexpensively, while it always looks complete if it's coordinated properly. And with the variety of bath items available today in a bouquet of colors it's extra-easy to pick an exciting range of patterns and textures to spruce up that small space.

When redecorating your bathroom, start with the shell of the room. Paint and wallpaper should be used for walls and ceilings. An intense color or grouping of colors in a strong wallpaper print will add new vitality to the most time-worn bath. And cotton carpeting for the bathroom floor helps further that totally-decorated look at surprisingly low cost.

Towels, shower curtains and the small accessories that lend extra flavor should be coordinated to the colors of walls, or selected in a color to contrast with a solid coat of paint. Antique bottles containing alcohol, mouthwash and other bathroom necessities, a small straw basket filled with dried posies, prints or etchings in colorful frames.

Eating to reach 100

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

From 1970 to 1975 an American anthropologist, Dr. Sula Benet, made frequent trips — some lasting as long as four months — to do field work in the Soviet Caucasus. That region of the world, a bridge between Asia and Europe, is known for the longevity of many of its people. As Dr. Benet notes, in 1974 she had the pleasure of meeting and knowing a delightful Caucasian woman 139 years old — probably the oldest woman then alive.

In a new book, "How To Live to Be 100," Dr. Benet discusses the factors that make for the longevity. She writes that this group's "rhythmic regularity of life" and their concerned family relationships seem important. In her studies she found that, "Order in daily routines and in the entire arc of life from cradle to grave contributes to the security of the individual and the group. Continuity and regulations in diet, work, sex life and leisure appear to lessen the strain on the body by avoiding sudden discontinuities and changes . . .

"Children, adults and old people all consume the same diet and seem to have no interest in trying new foods. It is not a matter of having no alternatives, or being confined to locally grown foods; they truly love their traditional foods and see no reason for changes or variety."

She found that the long-living persons eat moderately and have "an extremely high intake of natural vitamins" from fresh vegetables, both cultivated and wild. She discusses their wide use of beans as a high-protein food; their extensive use of spices and herbs — some cultivated and some wild; their common use of nuts and yogurt; their cultivation and enjoyment of fresh fruits as well as fresh vegetables. Their methods of cooking meat, roasting and broiling, tend to eliminate excess fat. "Candy and sweets are not common in the Caucasus, since granulated sugar is something of a novelty there."

Dr. Benet does not promise that people in our less relaxed and less family-oriented society, adopting the diet of the long-living people of the Caucasus, will also live to be over 100. But as a delightful bonus, she concludes her book with a chapter of recipes she gathered during her field work. An experienced cook might very well enjoy trying some of them. At our house, our adaptation of the Raisin and Honey Chicken recipe was much enjoyed.

RAISIN AND HONEY CHICKEN

- ½ cup extra long-grain rice
- 3 to 3½-pound broiler-fryer chicken
- Salt
- Wedge of lemon, if desired
- ½ cup raisins
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons honey

Cook rice according to package directions until it is tender-firm and the water has evaporated; set aside. Wash the chicken in salted water and dry; rub inside and outside with the lemon wedge, if used. Boil the raisins, in just enough water to cover them, for 5 minutes; drain. Transfer the raisins to a small frying pan; add the butter and honey; stir over low heat until hot; add to cooked rice and toss. Stuff into body cavity of chicken; loosely close cavity with small skewers. Place breast-side up in a small, buttered, shallow baking pan; do not cover. Bake in a 350-degree oven, basting occasionally with the drippings, until tender and browned — 1½ hours. Makes 4 to 5 servings. Adapted from "How To Live to Be 100" by Sula Benet (Dial Press).

Conscience taxes man

Dear Ann Landers: Attached to this letter is my personal check, made out to you for $4,000. Let me explain.

Several years ago I had a small business and I did something many small businessmen do -- cheated on my income tax. I forgot all about it until I became friendly with a Christian brother who awakened in me a sense of decency and integrity I never knew existed.

Lately God has been reminding me that I have a score to settle with the Internal Revenue Service. Although I don't know exactly how much I owe, I feel certain $4,000 would more than cover it.

I talked the problem over with my wife an she became upset when I told her I wanted to send my check directly to the IRS. She was afraid I'd be prosecuted, my reputation ruined, etc.

I then went to my certified public accountant. He advised me to send my check to Ann Landers, ask you to deposit it in your personal account and write your own check to the IRS for $4,000.

Enclosed is a separate check made out to you for your trouble. Thanks and God bless. Sign Me -- Straightening Out The Books

Dear Mr. Straight: I admire you for wanting to right an old wrong, and I'd like to help, but I, too, must answer to the IRS and keep my skirts 100 per cent clean.

My CPA would have to know what $4,000 is doing in my account. Next, the IRS man would want to know about that "stray" $4,000 check from me to IRS. Your cover could be easily blown, my friend, since your name is on the check.

So I herewith return both checks (I don't accept gratuities, but thank you very much) and suggest that you use a more anonymous transmittal agent, perhaps a Christian brother. See you in heaven!

Dear Ann Landers: I'm only 58, in very good physical condition and everyone tells me I look much younger than my years. I feel great but something has been bothering me.

Lately, my mind seems to be playing little tricks. I find myself forgetting things I've known for years -- telephone numbers, addresses, names of close friends and even relatives. It's embarrassing. This afternoon I went into another room and forgot what I went in there for. Can it be that I am becoming senile?

I become terribly annoyed with myself when I misplace things. It seems I am always hunting for my glasses, my favorite pen, my desk scissors or the current book I happen to be reading. Any advice? -- Slipping A Little

Dear Slipping: Move over. You have plenty of company. I'm exactly your age, feel fine, am far from senile (I think) -- and I forget plenty.

Being organized can eliminate many of the small annoyances. If you put things where they belong you won't have to hunt for them. It takes a little longer but it's well worth the extra few seconds. Try it. It works.

Quinlan's condition 'stable'

MORRIS PLAINS, N.J. (AP) — Karen Anne Quinlan couldn't survive without a respirator, said the physicians who testified last fall at her "death with dignity" trial, but five weeks after the machine was disconnected she was still holding her own.

"She remains stable," Stephan Hansbury, assistant administrator of the Morris View Nursing Home, said Tuesday. "There has been no change in her condition."

The comatose Miss Quinlan was transferred to the county-operated facility June 9 from St. Clare's Hospital in nearby Denville, where she was admitted April 15, 1975, suffering from the effects of tranquilizers and liquor.

At the week-long trial last October, physicians described her as contorted, emaciated and in a chronic and vegetative state. One neurologist said she was "too grotesque to be described."

Lewis Furniture took advantage of a porous defense by the Jaycees to score their runs on only six basehits but 11 errors assisted in the scoring. The Jaycees banged out seven safeties as Lewis Furniture made four miscues.

Lewis Furniture trailed by three runs until the fifth inning when they erupted for six to pull the game out of the fire.

Mike Hurley and Dye banged out two hits apiece to lead the Jaycees in batting. Andy Semancik and Kenny Davis were the leading hitter for Lewis Furniture with two apiece.

The Lions were added by six Security National Bank errors while collected only four hits off loser Sanders.

The Lions were led in batting by braden with two of the four hits.

The Standard scored in every inning but the fourth as they ripped seven hits off loser Mike Buchanan. David Pollard collected a pair of doubles to pace the Standard attack.

Collins Construction scored ten runs on only three hits in the nightcap as they nipped Flower Basket 10-9. James Carnell had tow or Collins hits, including a double. Paul Clark homered and doubled for Flower Basket's only safeties of the game.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Kenneth Deal got the victory on the mound and went four - for- for at the plate to lead Nunnelee to a 12-9 win over Ziegenhorn in the first game. Eugene Kimball also had four hits, three of them doubles, to help out Nunnelee's 13- hit charge. Chuck Hampton and Louie Ward had three hits apiece for the losers.

Kingman hits 27th for Mets as Cardinals fall again, 2-0

The New York Mets' strongman commands attention and gets respect everywhere he goes these days, especially from National League pitchers.

"I think I'm back in the groove," says the tall, powerful outfielder. "I'm just picking up the ball good. I think I have a nice, fluid motion now."

That motion has muscled out the most home runs in the major leagues so far this season, including Tuesday's night's two-run blast that carried the streaking Mets to a 2-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. It was Kingman's 27th homer, putting him on a collision course with Hack Wilson's National League record of 56.

"It's a funny thing about baseball," said Kingman. "You never know why you get out of a groove and you never know why you get back in. Home runs seem to come in bunches."

While talking freely about his upswing, Kingman shut out sports writers on one topic—the home run record.

"I don't know anything about Hack Wilson and I don't want to know anything about him," Kingman said icily after a reporter posed a question. "Don't quote me on any record, I don't want to know about it."

"Good night, gentlemen," he said, turning on his heel.

While Kingman was doing the hitting, Mickey Lolich was doing the pitching as the Mets won their sixth straight game. Lolich pitched a three-hitter to gain his first National League shutout after 39 with the Detroit Tigers in the American League.

Kingman lined the first pitch thrown to him by Pete Falcone in the first inning over the left field fence after Joe Torre had doubled. The ball landed at the 442-foot marker beyond the fence.

Hurley's homer lifts Kiwanis

Dawn Hurley became the first girl to hit a homerun over the fence in the Minor division of the Women's softball league Tuesday night and the homer helped Kiwanis down First National Bank 15-14 in eight innings. In other games Triangle remained undefeated as they whipped Sikeston Motor 15-3, Barkett's E Z Mart edged Bank of Sikeston 10-9 in 10 innings and Marks Food Mart clubbed Rotary 21-11.

Nora Springs' defending champion Triangle team looks as if they are going to win their second straight title in 1976.

Triangle scored 10 runs in the top of the second to put the game out of reach for Sikeston Motor.

Marks Food Mart began their hitting attack against Rotary in the first inning with four runs and added eight more in the third after Marks had scored five in the third.

Barkett's played a see-saw battle with Bank of Sikeston before scoring two runs in the eighth inning and holding off a rally by Bank of Sikeston. Barkett's had four hits and Bank of Sikeston had give.

First National took another loss as Kiwanis staged a last inning rally to win. First National had scored seven runs in the top of the eighth inning to take a 12-9 lead but Kiwanis rallied for three runs in the bottom of the seventh to tie the game. First National came right back to score two in the top of the eighth and looked like they were home free but Kiwanis managed to win the game with three runs in the bottom of the eighth.

Close contests mark play in Little League

A pair of exciting one- run games, one in the Musial League and another in the American league, highlighted Tuesday night's action in the Sikeston Little League at the complex.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

In National League action Tuesday night Lewis Furniture thumped the Jaycees 18-9 and Lions mauled Security National 11-0.

Lewis Furniture took advantage of a porous defense by the Jaycees to score their runs on only six basehits but 11 errors assisted in the scoring. The Jaycees banged out seven safeties as Lewis Furniture made four miscues.

Lewis Furniture trailed by three runs until the fifth inning when they erupted for six to pull the game out of the fire.

Mike Hurley and Dye banged out two hits apiece to lead the Jaycees in batting. Andy Semancik and Kenny Davis were the leading hitter for Lewis Furniture with two apiece.

The Lions were added by six Security National Bank errors while collected only four hits off loser Sanders.

The Lions were led in batting by braden with two of the four hits.

MUSIAL LEAGUE

Doyle Hutton limited Rotary to only one hit, a first- inning triple by James McRoy, as The Daily Standard rolled to an 11-3 win in the first game. The Standard scored in every inning but the fourth as they ripped seven hits off loser Mike Buchanan. David Pollard collected a pair of doubles to pace the Standard attack.

Collins Construction scored ten runs on only three hits in the nightcap as they nipped Flower Basket 10-9. James Carnell had tow or Collins hits, including a double. Paul Clark homered and doubled for Flower Basket's only safeties of the game.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Kenneth Deal got the victory on the mound and went four - for- for at the plate to lead Nunnelee to a 12-9 win over Ziegenhorn in the first game. Eugene Kimball also had four hits, three of them doubles, to help out Nunnelee's 13- hit charge. Chuck Hampton and Louie Ward had three hits apiece for the losers.

Ryan rallied for four runs in the bottom of the sixth to nip Fabick 9-8 in a thrilling night-cap. Marty Allen, Ashley Ross, Jimmie McPherson and Scott Bogle each smacked three hits as Ryan totaled 22 baseknocks in the game. Bobby Stinnett, the losing pitcher, had four hits and Brian Hindman three for the losers.

Area writers recognize 20 high school baseball players

Although the Missouri Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association decided (without consulting the local members, by the way) not to select all- district and all-state teams this year, several Southeast Missouri writers decided that it would be appropriate to pick an all-district team in both classes anyway. It was felt that there are several outstanding players in the district this year, and it would be unfair to these athletes if they did not get some kind of recognition. A St. Louis newspaper selected their own all-state team, but apparently was not aware that baseball is played in this part of the state.

So, a group of ara area writers met recently to select what will be known as the Southeast Missouri Baseball Writers All-Star team for 1976. Ten players were selected in each class. No honorable mention selections were made.

In Class AA, the Sikeston Bulldogs, 3-1 losers to the eventual state champions, Springfield Glendale, in the semifinals of the state tournament, dominated the voting. Five Bulldogs were on the squad,with Cape Central placing three and Jackson two.

In Class A, Chaffee landed four players on the roster, while Lilbourn, second place finishers in the state, had two players, along with Bernie. Notre Dame and Kelly were each represented with one athlete as well.

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Bears have signed running back Ron Cuie of Oregon State and linebacker Wayne Womack of Utah State to 1976 National Football League contracts.

The Bears announced Tuesday the signing of Cuie, 6-1 and 199 pounds, who was second in the Pac-Eight in kickoff returns last season with 23 for 470 yards. He was the Bears' 14th round draft choice.

Womack, a defensive tackle at 6-2 and 240 pounds, will be tried at linebacker by the Bears. Womack was signed as a free agent.

Area writers recognize 20 high school baseball players

Although the Missouri Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association decided (without consulting the local members, by the way) not to select all- district and all-state teams this year, several Southeast Missouri writers decided that it would be appropriate to pick an all-district team in both classes anyway. It was felt that there are several outstanding players in the district this year, and it would be unfair to these athletes if they did not get some kind of recognition. A St. Louis newspaper selected their own all-state team, but apparently was not aware that baseball is played in this part of the state.

So, a group of ara area writers met recently to select what will be known as the Southeast Missouri Baseball Writers All-Star team for 1976. Ten players were selected in each class. No honorable mention selections were made.

In Class AA, the Sikeston Bulldogs, 3-1 losers to the eventual state champions, Springfield Glendale, in the semifinals of the state tournament, dominated the voting. Five Bulldogs were on the squad,with Cape Central placing three and Jackson two.

In Class A, Chaffee landed four players on the roster, while Lilbourn, second place finishers in the state, had two players, along with Bernie. Notre Dame and Kelly were each represented with one athlete as well.

Womack, a defensive tackle at 6-2 and 240 pounds, will be tried at linebacker by the Bears. Womack was signed as a free agent.

Bank of Sikeston; 76'ers win

Fifty-three year- old Dave Mulcahy outpitched Rick O'Donald as Bank of Sikeston edged Steward Steel 3-2 and Tom Stinnett won his second game in two nights as the 76'ers whipped the Eagles 2-1 in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League Tuesday night.

Dave Mulcahy is making a comeback after missing the first part of the season for the Bank of Sikeston. It was his double with two on that won the game in the second inning.

Bob Dyer tripled in the first inning and scored on an error to give the winners the lead and after scoring two more runs in the second. Mulcahy held onto the lead until Jim Sweet, who is on a homerun binge blasted one over the fence after Fred Steward had doubled in the sixth inning.

The loss by Steward Steel enabled idle Marks Food Mart to slip back into first place after falling out of the top spot Monday night. Steward Steel is second with a 6-3 record and Marks is 7-3.

Tom Stinnett outpitched John Chessor to win the second game. The 76'ers scored a single run in the fifth to take a 1-0 lead as Bill Hampton tripled and Ron Hamra scored him on a single. The Eagles scored their run in the top of the sixth as Kenny Stokes squeezed home the tying run.

Tommy Green used his speed to win the game as he hit a drive off the fence for an inside the park homerun in the bottom of the sixth.

$1.1 million price tag on Gilmore

NEW YORK (AP) — The Chicago Bulls, coachless and without a general manager, must now decide if they want to spend $1.1 million to obtain the contract of former American Basketball Association star Artis Gilmore.

That's the price tag that went on Gilmore Tuesday when the National Basketball Association announced procedures to handle the drafting of former ABA players whose teams did not join in the NBA as part of the recent merger agreement.

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien announced the value of Gilmore and 19 other players declared eligible for the draft, which will be held in July after expansion agreements are signed and a district court gives preliminary approval to the proposed settlement with the ABA and the ABA Players Association.

Gilmore's price represents more than one-third of the $3.08 million value placed on the 20 players. The Bulls can make the decision on whether they want to spend the money for the 7-foot-2 Gilmore since they have the first pick as a reward for compiling the worst record in the NBA last season.

Other draft prices include $500,000 for center-forward Marvin Barnes of the Utah Rockies, $350,000 for center-forward Moses Malone of Utah and $300,000 for center-forward Maurice Lucas of Kentucky.

Kentucky's Louis Dampier, whose 13,726 points made him the league's all-time scoring leader, is available for $20,000.

Fred Lewis, an original member of the league as was Dampier, also is available for $20,000.

Each of the 22 teams in the expanded NBA will have a chance to pick, and if every player isn't selected in the first round the drafting will continue for up to three rounds. The value of each player will be reduced by a specified percentage if he isn't picked in the first round.

There is no doubt the Bulls, who have lacked a strong center for some time, could use Gilmore. He averaged 24.6 points per game and led the ABA in rebounding for a fourth consecutive year with a 15.5 average last season.

However, after agreeing to pay the price for Gilmore, the Bulls would be responsible for his contract under the merger agreement. In Gilmore's case it is in six figures for one year. And although there is time remaining before his ABA contract runs out, his agent has let the Bulls know some renegotiating is desired.

In addition, the Bulls have drafted All-American Scott May, the Associated Press' College Player of the Year last season, and they will have to pay a big sum for his services.

The final decision on selecting Gilmore probably will rest with Arthur Wirtz, one of the Bulls' principal owners. Wirtz, also owner of the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, recently obligated some $3 million for hockey star Bobby Orr.

Pollard records shutout

Bank of Sikeston used a last inning rally to edge Elliott-Newton 8-7 and IBEW shut out Davis - Bird 10-0 in the Junior Babe Ruth League Tuesday night.

Elliott- Newton charged to a 7-0 lead against Bank of Sikeston by scoring six runs in the top of the second inning and a single tally in the third and held a 7-0 lead going into the bottom of the fourth before Bank of Sikeston began to take advantage of their opportunities and scored one run in the fourth frame and seven in the bottom of the fifth. The winners scored all their runs with the aid of only four baseshits.

Mark Alberts was the leading hitter for Elliott- Newton with two and Derek Curtis led the winners with two of the four hits.

Doug Pollard was nearly unhittable against Davis- Bird as the hard thrower allowed only a single hit by Steven Burgess.

IBEW found pitchers Burgess and Jeff Schwab not too difficult to hit as they scored five runs in the bottom of the second inning en route to their runaway.

Pollard was the leading hitter for IBEW with two safeties.

In a makeup game played Sunday, Home Materials dumped Nowell 11-4. Scott Campbell ripped three hits to lead Home Materials' seven- hit attack. Campbell was also the winning hurler, while Mike Smith was the loser.

Royals down Minnesota

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Kansas City's Hal McRae got his backside up too high, but at the same time it caused Minnesota shortstop Roy Smalley to get his throw too high and it turned out to be too bad for Twins pitcher Dave Goltz.

"My rump got a little too high and I couldn't get it back down," said McRae, who beat out an infield single in the 10th inning and was awarded second base on the overthrow by Smalley. "I was running as hard as I could."

McRae said he could have not made the turn at first on the overthrow because he'd pretty well lost his balance trying to beat out the slow roller.

That hit was only the third off Goltz for Kansas City, which leads the American League in hitting. McRae then scooted to third base on an infield grounder to Smalley and then scored the only run of the night on Fred Patek's fly ball to center that wrapped up the victory for Al Fitzmorris, now 9-4.

"McRae played a magnificent game," said Twins Manager Gene Mauch. "Cincinnati thought he was going to be that kind of player before he broke his leg, but he's become that kind of player now despite the broken leg."

McRae also robbed the Twins of potential extra base hits with running catches in the third and ninth innings. And he held Butch Wynegar to a single on a line smash down the left field line in the 10th with another sparkling defensive play.

"He might play another five or six years and not have another game like that," said Mauch. "He took care of a lot of our adjustments."

"I think it's the first good game I've really thrown this year," said Fitzmorris. "I was kind of getting into the middle of my second breath in the 10th inning."

He was supported by three double plays in addition to the fine catches by McRae.

"He's been struggling lately," said Royals Manager Whitey Herzog. "He told me he felt only so-so in the 10th. I would have brought in (Steve) Mingori if theehave buntthe runner to second."

Lyman Bostock slapped a one-bouncer to Frank White and the Royals second baseman tagged pinch-runner Dan Ford and threw to first completing the double play. Fitzmorris fanned Tony Oliva for the final out.

The unearned run spoiled what was probably Goltz' best pitched game in the majors. The big righthander, now 7-6, allowed only singles to Tony Solaita and Frank White prior to McRae's hit leading off the 10th.

"That's the kind of pitching we want," said Mauch. "Unfortunately we wasted it."

Bank of Sikeston; 76'ers win

Fifty-three year- old Dave Mulcahy outpitched Rick O'Donald as Bank of Sikeston edged Steward Steel 3-2 and Tom Stinnett won his second game in two nights as the 76'ers whipped the Eagles 2-1 in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League Tuesday night.

Dave Mulcahy is making a comeback after missing the first part of the season for the Bank of Sikeston. It was his double with two on that won the game in the second inning.

Bob Dyer tripled in the first inning and scored on an error to give the winners the lead and after scoring two more runs in the second. Mulcahy held onto the lead until Jim Sweet, who is on a homerun binge blasted one over the fence after Fred Steward had doubled in the sixth inning.

The loss by Steward Steel enabled idle Marks Food Mart to slip back into first place after falling out of the top spot Monday night. Steward Steel is second with a 6-3 record and Marks is 7-3.

Tom Stinnett outpitched John Chessor to win the second game. The 76'ers scored a single run in the fifth to take a 1-0 lead as Bill Hampton tripled and Ron Hamra scored him on a single. The Eagles scored their run in the top of the sixth as Kenny Stokes squeezed home the tying run.

Tommy Green used his speed to win the game as he hit a drive off the fence for an inside the park homerun in the bottom of the sixth.

$1.1 million price tag on Gilmore

NEW YORK (AP) — The Chicago Bulls, coachless and without a general manager, must now decide if they want to spend $1.1 million to obtain the contract of former American Basketball Association star Artis Gilmore.

That's the price tag that went on Gilmore Tuesday when the National Basketball Association announced procedures to handle the drafting of former ABA players whose teams did not join in the NBA as part of the recent merger agreement.

NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien announced the value of Gilmore and 19 other players declared eligible for the draft, which will be held in July after expansion agreements are signed and a district court gives preliminary approval to the proposed settlement with the ABA and the ABA Players Association.

Gilmore's price represents more than one-third of the $3.08 million value placed on the 20 players. The Bulls can make the decision on whether they want to spend the money for the 7-foot-2 Gilmore since they have the first pick as a reward for compiling the worst record in the NBA last season.

Other draft prices include $500,000 for center-forward Marvin Barnes of the Utah Rockies, $350,000 for center-forward Moses Malone of Utah and $300,000 for center-forward Maurice Lucas of Kentucky.

Kentucky's Louis Dampier, whose 13,726 points made him the league's all-time scoring leader, is available for $20,000.

Fred Lewis, an original member of the league as was Dampier, also is available for $20,000.

Each of the 22 teams in the expanded NBA will have a chance to pick, and if every player isn't selected in the first round the drafting will continue for up to three rounds. The value of each player will be reduced by a specified percentage if he isn't picked in the first round.

The final decision on selecting Gilmore probably will rest with Arthur Wirtz, one of the Bulls' principal owners. Wirtz, also owner of the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, recently obligated some $3 million for hockey star Bobby Orr.

'Superjam' attracted 38,000

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Neither Lou Brock nor Bake McBride was on hand, but that didn't keep the season's largest crowd from pouring into downtown Busch Stadium Tuesday.

The occasion was a rock concert advertised as "Superjam," which attracted some 38,000 youngsters—and a few oldsters, too.

"I'm here for the hell of it. It's a good time," said Jules Plowers, 77, who was interrupted doing his own version of the "Bump" with Kathy Gardner, 17.

A bandstand set up in the middle of the field featured the groups Jefferson Starship, Fleetwood Mac and Jeff Beck and Ted Nugent during the stadium's first rock concert since 1966.

The crowd was both larger and drier than some 20,000 who in 1966 defied a downpour and pressed into the stadium to attend a Beatles concert.

Police and about 50 black-shirted security guards reported few problems. "If you leave the drugs out of it, this was no worse than a baseball doubleheader on a hot day," said Genevieve Phillips, a nurse on duty.

One concert-goer, Gary Reickenbacker, 20, suffered a broken foot when he slipped from a crosswalk to the stadium and fell 15 feet to the street below.

MPS is urged to have long range planning

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Better long-range planning and expansion of the board of directors have been recommended as ways to solve some of the problems facing the beleagured Missouri Public Service Co., according to a five-month study of the firm by Arthur D. Little, Inc.

The study, made public Tuesday, was ordered by the Missouri Public Service Commission last year following increasing financial problems plaguing the Raytown utility. The cost of the review was about $96,000.

The 114-page report said the current management structure of the company was too inbred and recommended revisions including expansion of the board of directors from six to nine members to provide a broader perspective for basing major policy decisions.

The report also cited failure of the company to maintain documentation of key management decisions and recommended creation of a five-year plan to meet the future growth and needs of the utility's more than 100,000 customers.

The management study, however, cited no specific problems that had resulted from the sitations it recommended changes in.

The Little firm was selected to do the study primarily because it had performed no other work for Missouri Public Service Co. or any other utility in the state, eliminating any possibility of a conflict of interest.

The commission said it will discuss the findings with the company next month before taking any action regarding the report.

The report noted that a major part of the problem facing the company is the fact that it has an imbalance of residential customers, creating problems in its generating capabilities, and the study said there appeared to be no improvement in that situation in the near future.

Teamsters loose tax exempt pension status

WASHINGTON (AP) — The loss of tax-exempt status for the Teamsters union's biggest pension fund could have a devastating impact on the fund itself, the employers who finance it and the pensioners who benefit from it, says a key trucking industry official.

"The ramifications are really far-reaching," said William G. McIntyre, president of Trucking Employers, Inc., the industry's bargaining arm.

McIntyre said the disclosure Tuesday that the Internal Revenue Service has revoked the tax-exempt status of the $1.4-billion Teamsters' Central States Pension Fund for alleged mismanagement and imprudent loans came as a surprise.

IRS officials, in keeping with policy, declined direct comment on the agency's action, contending that the affairs of taxpayers are confidential. But the officials did discuss generally the impact of an IRS decision revoking a fund's tax-exempt status, and their assessment of the potential impact agreed with McIntyre's.

If the action survives expected appeals by the fund's trustees — IRS officials say the process could take years — the Central States fund would be liable for taxes on its earnings back to 1965. The revocation was reroactive to Jan. 31, 1965.

Ths could involve millions of dollars in both past and future earnings and substantially reduce the amount of money available for paying out benefits. That would mean employers who contribute to the fund in behalf of their workers either would have to kick in more money or the benefits would be lower than they would have been otherwise. The workers do not contribute to the fund.

For employers who contribute to the fund, the government's action could mean they will have to pay taxes on contributions deducted since 1965, as well as on future contributions.

In the year ended Jan. 31, 1975, records filed with the Labor Department show the trucking industry contributed $283 million to the Central States fund. If forced to pay taxes on that amount, the bill might run as high as $135 million.

Over the years, the fund has been accused repeatedly of investing its members' money unwisely.

Korean war POW will return to U.S. for visit

HAWTHORNE, Calif. (AP) — Mrs. George Veneris never lost faith that her son, James, a prisoner of war who chose to remain with his Communist captors after the Korean War, would someday return to see her.

"It's the biggest thrill in 25 years," she said after learning Tuesday that her her son will be allowed to visit his native country.

Veneris, who now lives in China, was one of 23 American prisoners of war who stayed with the Communists after the war. He asked to return to the United States for a visit and will be issued a passport, State Department officials said Tuesday.

The State Department said the 53-year-old Veneris is still an American citizen and needs only a passport to return to the United States.

All the other Americans but one, Howard G. Adams, have returned home since the Korean war. Adams also lives in China.

Mrs. Veneris, 78, last saw her son 25 years ago when he left for Korea. But her daughter, Nesta Greth, said her mother never doubted she would see James again.

"She always had this faith that he would come back and see her," Mrs. Greth said. "She has been waiting for this for 25 years."

Although her husband died in 1954, Mrs. Veneris still lives in the same house here that she did when her son went to Korea.

Mrs. Greth said that the family has corresponded regularly with Veneris despite the lengthy separation.

"My sister received a letter Friday and he mentioned he had been thinking of coming to America," she said. "But he didn't say when. He has been saying this through the years."

She said that her brother was very happy living in China, that he was married and had two children of his own and four from his wife's first marriage. He has worked in a paper mill in Tsinan for the past 25 years, she said, and will return to his home there after visiting the United States.

No date for Veneris' visit has been set. State Department sources said Veneris will not be charged with any crime and will be allowed to move around the country like any other citizen.

Born in Vandergrift, Pa., Veneris entered the Army in 1940 and took part in the World War II New Guinea campaign in the Pacific. He was honorably discharged in 1945 but reenlisted five years later. Three months after that, he was listed as missing in action in Korea.

Veneris and 22 others refused repatriation in 1953 during the prisoner-of-war exchange after the Korean armistice. Two of the 23 changed their minds immediately and were imprisoned in the United States after they were convicted of collaborating with the enemy.

The Defense Department ordered dishonorable discharges for all 21 men in June 1954 and said it had no further jurisdiction over them.

'Superjam' attracted 38,000

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Neither Lou Brock nor Bake McBride was on hand, but that didn't keep the season's largest crowd from pouring into downtown Busch Stadium Tuesday.

The occasion was a rock concert advertised as "Superjam," which attracted some 38,000 youngsters—and a few oldsters, too.

"I'm here for the hell of it. It's a good time," said Jules Plowers, 77, who was interrupted doing his own version of the "Bump" with Kathy Gardner, 17.

A bandstand set up in the middle of the field featured the groups Jefferson Starship, Fleetwood Mac and Jeff Beck and Ted Nugent during the stadium's first rock concert since 1966.

The crowd was both larger and drier than some 20,000 who in 1966 defied a downpour and pressed into the stadium to attend a Beatles concert.

Police and about 50 black-shirted security guards reported few problems. "If you leave the drugs out of it, this was no worse than a baseball doubleheader on a hot day," said Genevieve Phillips, a nurse on duty.

One concert-goer, Gary Reickenbacker, 20, suffered a broken foot when he slipped from a crosswalk to the stadium and fell 15 feet to the street below.

MPS is urged to have long range planning

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Better long-range planning and expansion of the board of directors have been recommended as ways to solve some of the problems facing the beleagured Missouri Public Service Co., according to a five-month study of the firm by Arthur D. Little, Inc.

The study, made public Tuesday, was ordered by the Missouri Public Service Commission last year following increasing financial problems plaguing the Raytown utility. The cost of the review was about $96,000.

The 114-page report said the current management structure of the company was too inbred and recommended revisions including expansion of the board of directors from six to nine members to provide a broader perspective for basing major policy decisions.

The report also cited failure of the company to maintain documentation of key management decisions and recommended creation of a five-year plan to meet the future growth and needs of the utility's more than 100,000 customers.

The management study, however, cited no specific problems that had resulted from the sitations it recommended changes in.

The Little firm was selected to do the study primarily because it had performed no other work for Missouri Public Service Co. or any other utility in the state, eliminating any possibility of a conflict of interest.

The commission said it will discuss the findings with the company next month before taking any action regarding the report.

The report noted that a major part of the problem facing the company is the fact that it has an imbalance of residential customers, creating problems in its generating capabilities, and the study said there appeared to be no improvement in that situation in the near future.

Teamsters loose tax exempt pension status

WASHINGTON (AP) — The loss of tax-exempt status for the Teamsters union's biggest pension fund could have a devastating impact on the fund itself, the employers who finance it and the pensioners who benefit from it, says a key trucking industry official.

"The ramifications are really far-reaching," said William G. McIntyre, president of Trucking Employers, Inc., the industry's bargaining arm.

McIntyre said the disclosure Tuesday that the Internal Revenue Service has revoked the tax-exempt status of the $1.4-billion Teamsters' Central States Pension Fund for alleged mismanagement and imprudent loans came as a surprise.

IRS officials, in keeping with policy, declined direct comment on the agency's action, contending that the affairs of taxpayers are confidential. But the officials did discuss generally the impact of an IRS decision revoking a fund's tax-exempt status, and their assessment of the potential impact agreed with McIntyre's.

If the action survives expected appeals by the fund's trustees — IRS officials say the process could take years — the Central States fund would be liable for taxes on its earnings back to 1965. The revocation was reroactive to Jan. 31, 1965.

Ths could involve millions of dollars in both past and future earnings and substantially reduce the amount of money available for paying out benefits. That would mean employers who contribute to the fund in behalf of their workers either would have to kick in more money or the benefits would be lower than they would have been otherwise. The workers do not contribute to the fund.

For employers who contribute to the fund, the government's action could mean they will have to pay taxes on contributions deducted since 1965, as well as on future contributions.

In the year ended Jan. 31, 1975, records filed with the Labor Department show the trucking industry contributed $283 million to the Central States fund. If forced to pay taxes on that amount, the bill might run as high as $135 million.

Over the years, the fund has been accused repeatedly of investing its members' money unwisely.

Korean war POW will return to U.S. for visit

HAWTHORNE, Calif. (AP) — Mrs. George Veneris never lost faith that her son, James, a prisoner of war who chose to remain with his Communist captors after the Korean War, would someday return to see her.

"It's the biggest thrill in 25 years," she said after learning Tuesday that her her son will be allowed to visit his native country.

Veneris, who now lives in China, was one of 23 American prisoners of war who stayed with the Communists after the war. He asked to return to the United States for a visit and will be issued a passport, State Department officials said Tuesday.

The State Department said the 53-year-old Veneris is still an American citizen and needs only a passport to return to the United States.

All the other Americans but one, Howard G. Adams, have returned home since the Korean war. Adams also lives in China.

Mrs. Veneris, 78, last saw her son 25 years ago when he left for Korea. But her daughter, Nesta Greth, said her mother never doubted she would see James again.

"She always had this faith that he would come back and see her," Mrs. Greth said. "She has been waiting for this for 25 years."

Although her husband died in 1954, Mrs. Veneris still lives in the same house here that she did when her son went to Korea.

Mrs. Greth said that the family has corresponded regularly with Veneris despite the lengthy separation.

"My sister received a letter Friday and he mentioned he had been thinking of coming to America," she said. "But he didn't say when. He has been saying this through the years."

She said that her brother was very happy living in China, that he was married and had two children of his own and four from his wife's first marriage. He has worked in a paper mill in Tsinan for the past 25 years, she said, and will return to his home there after visiting the United States.

No date for Veneris' visit has been set. State Department sources said Veneris will not be charged with any crime and will be allowed to move around the country like any other citizen.

Born in Vandergrift, Pa., Veneris entered the Army in 1940 and took part in the World War II New Guinea campaign in the Pacific. He was honorably discharged in 1945 but reenlisted five years later. Three months after that, he was listed as missing in action in Korea.

Veneris and 22 others refused repatriation in 1953 during the prisoner-of-war exchange after the Korean armistice. Two of the 23 changed their minds immediately and were imprisoned in the United States after they were convicted of collaborating with the enemy.

The Defense Department ordered dishonorable discharges for all 21 men in June 1954 and said it had no further jurisdiction over them.

Unknown St. Louis comedian makes good on variety show

A legitimate question, Kelly Monteith concedes. Even the writers who worked on his four-week summer series put cracks in the scripts like: "Kelly Monteith enters (who?)."

For although Monteith has been earning a living as a comedian for 10 years, working his way up to top night clubs across the country with an occasional shot on the TV talk shows, he was still an unknown to most people when "The Kelly Monteith Show" hit the air.

Just look at the other flks who are starring in summer series this year — Dinah Shore, John Davidson, the Jackson Five, Johnny Cash, Diahann Carroll.

Even Kelly was surprised when CBS-TV offered to let him host four half-hour variety shows. The third one airs tonight.

It was, he said, the first big break of his career.

Monteith, a likeable fellow whose on-screen charm is reminiscent of Dick Cavett, was born in St. Louis 33 years ago and says he wanted to be a comic from the time he was a child.

After graduating high school he attended the Pasadena Playhouse College of Theater Arts in Southern California for two years, began writing and performing his own material at small clubs in the Los Angeles area and then served in the U.S. Naval Air Reserve.

When he was a civilian again he did some writing for other comedians in Las Vegas, then finally got back on the performing circuit for good when he teamed up with another comic in Florida in 1966.

The partnership lasted about a year, then Monteith struck out on his own and worked his way up. He finally made it back to Las Vegas and that's where Bob Tamplin, head of variety programs at CBS, spotted him getting laughs from such diverse audience-attracters as Bobbi Gentry and the Osmond Brothers.

Templin said CBS decided to give Monteith a shot because the network is always looking for fresh new talent. In doing the four shows, though, Monteith chose to stick to the tried-and-true variety format of monologues and sketches.

He didn't have enough experience in the medium, the series wasn't going to be on long enough and the budget wasn't big enough to try anything innovative, the comedian explained. Besides, his producer and writers were on leave from "The Carol Burnett Show," which has had a bit of success with that format.

Cyclone causes $500,000 damage

Morehouse -- Fire broke out in No. 1 mill of the Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Co., Sunday. The wooden structure was soon a mass of flames and it seemed the fire would spread to the retail department and to the residences of John Spence and Dr. I. H. Dunaway, but the heroic work of the fire fighters gradually drove back the flames and confined it to the one mill in spite of a strong northeastern wind.

A cyclone swept down upon Sikeson from the east Wednesday afternoon and during the hour it raged, $500,000 worth of damage was done to property and crops within the area of two miles on all sides of the town.

What's the law?

The case of the pregnant Marine

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Marines ran in Suzie's family. Her husband was a Marine, she was a Marine, and, when her commandant learned that she was going to have her own little Marine, the tradition ended abruptly.

She was ousted from the Marines under a regulation that required the immediate discharge of any female Leatherneck who became pregnant.

Insisting that the regulation was unconstitutional, Suzie fought her discharge in court.

"There's nothing unconstitutional about it," responded a Marine official. "Marines, traditionally, have to be ready for action at all times at a moment's notice. And, obviously, a woman Marine who is pregnant can't shape up to ship out. She's too corpulent for the Corps."

"Nonsense!" was Suzie's answer. "Pregnancy is the only disability under the regulations that requires an immediate discharge and it's no more disabling than a broken leg. As for my corpulence, I've seen male Marines who look like they're in their 13th month."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, woudl you uphold the validity of the regulation requiring Suzie's discharge?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that since all other temporary disabilities that might prohibit a Marine from responding like 'quicksilver to duty's call" are free from the mandatory discharge remedy, the regulation as a tool for insuring mobility and readiness is irrationally overinclusive, and, concluded the judge, discriminatory against pregnant female Marines.

Dr. Lamb

Diabetics and booze shouldn't mix

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Should diabetics drink alcoholic beverages?

DEAR READER — I don't think so. Diabetes may cause liver damage anyway because the liver can't use glucose normally and tends to become a fatty liver. Also, alcohol can cause low blood sugar by literally using all the enzyme in the liver that would normally be used to convert proteins to glucose. This can make it difficult or impossible to regulate insulin dosage. Finally, for those diabetics who have a mild disease that can be controlled by weight control, alcohol makes it difficult to diet and eliminate or prevent obesity. I can't think of a single good thing alcohol does for a diabetic.

To give you more information on how alcohol affects the body I'm sending you The Health Letter number 1-4, Alcohol, Whiskey, Gin, Vodka, Rum, Wine, Beer. Others who want this information can forward 50 cents for it along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Will you please tell me what can be done for a person who falls asleep as soon as she sits down. This person is in her late 50s. It makes no difference how many people are sitting around visiting, in no time she is asleep. Is this called narcolepsy? Will it get worse as she gets older? Can anything be done for it and is it serious? She can work all day and appears well. One time she just passed out and fell. We are very worried about this. She has been this way for several years now.

One doctor prescribed pep pills but her eyes looked terrible so she quit taking them. I think it was Benzedrine.

DEAR READER — Yes, you are describing narcolepsy. There is, of course, a dividing line between normal drowsiness and constant severe sleepiness which is classified as narcolepsy.

The cause of narcolepsy is unknown but it does occur in both men and women and it often begins in adolescence although it can begin later in life. Once it starts, the individual will continue to have excessive drowsiness throughout life unless it is treated. In some individuals it is progressive. They may start out just having trouble with being drowsy during lecture periods and during social events or when they are presumably visiting with friends. The episodes may become more frequent and longer to the extent that some individuals sleep a good part of their life away.

These people often are able to avoid danger such as a car wreck because they can feel the sensation of drowsiness occurring and can pull to the side of the road if they are driving or stop any other activity they might be doing which would be hazardous.

There are no significant physical findings or other symptoms in individuals who have narcolepsy. The diagnosis is usually made on the basis of the story of the illness plus the absence of any other important medical findings.

It is not at all surprising that this lady was given pep pills. That's a standard treatment. Perhaps the two best forms of treatment are Dexedrine and Ritalin, both of which stimulate the brain.

For mild forms some individuals do well by drinking lots of coffee during the day. The caffeine in coffee is a cerebral stimulant and has actions similar to Dexedrine.

A legitimate question, Kelly Monteith concedes. Even the writers who worked on his four-week summer series put cracks in the scripts like: "Kelly Monteith enters (who?)."

For although Monteith has been earning a living as a comedian for 10 years, working his way up to top night clubs across the country with an occasional shot on the TV talk shows, he was still an unknown to most people when "The Kelly Monteith Show" hit the air.

Just look at the other flks who are starring in summer series this year — Dinah Shore, John Davidson, the Jackson Five, Johnny Cash, Diahann Carroll.

Even Kelly was surprised when CBS-TV offered to let him host four half-hour variety shows. The third one airs tonight.

It was, he said, the first big break of his career.

Monteith, a likeable fellow whose on-screen charm is reminiscent of Dick Cavett, was born in St. Louis 33 years ago and says he wanted to be a comic from the time he was a child.

After graduating high school he attended the Pasadena Playhouse College of Theater Arts in Southern California for two years, began writing and performing his own material at small clubs in the Los Angeles area and then served in the U.S. Naval Air Reserve.

When he was a civilian again he did some writing for other comedians in Las Vegas, then finally got back on the performing circuit for good when he teamed up with another comic in Florida in 1966.

The partnership lasted about a year, then Monteith struck out on his own and worked his way up. He finally made it back to Las Vegas and that's where Bob Tamplin, head of variety programs at CBS, spotted him getting laughs from such diverse audience-attracters as Bobbi Gentry and the Osmond Brothers.

Templin said CBS decided to give Monteith a shot because the network is always looking for fresh new talent. In doing the four shows, though, Monteith chose to stick to the tried-and-true variety format of monologues and sketches.

He didn't have enough experience in the medium, the series wasn't going to be on long enough and the budget wasn't big enough to try anything innovative, the comedian explained. Besides, his producer and writers were on leave from "The Carol Burnett Show," which has had a bit of success with that format.

What's the law?

The case of the pregnant Marine

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Marines ran in Suzie's family. Her husband was a Marine, she was a Marine, and, when her commandant learned that she was going to have her own little Marine, the tradition ended abruptly.

She was ousted from the Marines under a regulation that required the immediate discharge of any female Leatherneck who became pregnant.

Insisting that the regulation was unconstitutional, Suzie fought her discharge in court.

"There's nothing unconstitutional about it," responded a Marine official. "Marines, traditionally, have to be ready for action at all times at a moment's notice. And, obviously, a woman Marine who is pregnant can't shape up to ship out. She's too corpulent for the Corps."

"Nonsense!" was Suzie's answer. "Pregnancy is the only disability under the regulations that requires an immediate discharge and it's no more disabling than a broken leg. As for my corpulence, I've seen male Marines who look like they're in their 13th month."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, woudl you uphold the validity of the regulation requiring Suzie's discharge?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that since all other temporary disabilities that might prohibit a Marine from responding like 'quicksilver to duty's call" are free from the mandatory discharge remedy, the regulation as a tool for insuring mobility and readiness is irrationally overinclusive, and, concluded the judge, discriminatory against pregnant female Marines.

'Bleachers or Bust' said to be a success

ORAN — A "Bleachers Or Bust" carnival held by the Oran Little League was a huge success, thanks to the many contributors, according to co-chairmen Claude Anne Sallee and Kay Rampley.

The carnival held June 19 raised approximately $2,200 to build new bleacher stands and other necessary repairs for the Little League ball diamond.

Prizes were given away. The winner of a weed-eater was Laverne Stanley. Norvel Hosea, won a coffee maker. Paul Neal, a baseball glove and Stuart Dohogne, a rod and reel. The winners are from Oran except Hosea who is from Delta.

50 years ago
June 30, 1926

Morehouse -- Fire broke out in No. 1 mill of the Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Co., Sunday. The wooden structure was soon a mass of flames and it seemed the fire would spread to the retail department and to the residences of John Spence and Dr. I. H. Dunaway, but the heroic work of the fire fighters gradually drove back the flames and confined it to the one mill in spite of a strong northeastern wind.

A cyclone swept down upon Sikeson from the east Wednesday afternoon and during the hour it raged, $500,000 worth of damage was done to property and crops within the area of two miles on all sides of the town.

Mrs. Sarah M. Maness died at her home in Big Opening yesterday at the advanced age of 87 years.

A large crowd of Sikeston Democrats, who joined the Roosevelt Nominators' movement, gathered in the American Legion arena Saturday night to hear President Roosevelt accept his renomination as the Democratic candidate for president of the United States. Reception over the Philco radio furnished by the Lair Co., was so excellent that Sikestonians heard the speech almost as clearly as if they had been sittting in Franklin Field in Philadelphia, where it was delivered.

Rains that fell Tuesday afternoon and started again late at night were immeasurably beneficial to growers of cotton, cowpeas, watermelons andlate corn.

Dr. Lamb

Diabetics and booze shouldn't mix

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Should diabetics drink alcoholic beverages?

DEAR READER — I don't think so. Diabetes may cause liver damage anyway because the liver can't use glucose normally and tends to become a fatty liver. Also, alcohol can cause low blood sugar by literally using all the enzyme in the liver that would normally be used to convert proteins to glucose. This can make it difficult or impossible to regulate insulin dosage. Finally, for those diabetics who have a mild disease that can be controlled by weight control, alcohol makes it difficult to diet and eliminate or prevent obesity. I can't think of a single good thing alcohol does for a diabetic.

To give you more information on how alcohol affects the body I'm sending you The Health Letter number 1-4, Alcohol, Whiskey, Gin, Vodka, Rum, Wine, Beer. Others who want this information can forward 50 cents for it along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Will you please tell me what can be done for a person who falls asleep as soon as she sits down. This person is in her late 50s. It makes no difference how many people are sitting around visiting, in no time she is asleep. Is this called narcolepsy? Will it get worse as she gets older? Can anything be done for it and is it serious? She can work all day and appears well. One time she just passed out and fell. We are very worried about this. She has been this way for several years now.

One doctor prescribed pep pills but her eyes looked terrible so she quit taking them. I think it was Benzedrine.

DEAR READER — Yes, you are describing narcolepsy. There is, of course, a dividing line between normal drowsiness and constant severe sleepiness which is classified as narcolepsy.

The cause of narcolepsy is unknown but it does occur in both men and women and it often begins in adolescence although it can begin later in life. Once it starts, the individual will continue to have excessive drowsiness throughout life unless it is treated. In some individuals it is progressive. They may start out just having trouble with being drowsy during lecture periods and during social events or when they are presumably visiting with friends. The episodes may become more frequent and longer to the extent that some individuals sleep a good part of their life away.

These people often are able to avoid danger such as a car wreck because they can feel the sensation of drowsiness occurring and can pull to the side of the road if they are driving or stop any other activity they might be doing which would be hazardous.

There are no significant physical findings or other symptoms in individuals who have narcolepsy. The diagnosis is usually made on the basis of the story of the illness plus the absence of any other important medical findings.

It is not at all surprising that this lady was given pep pills. That's a standard treatment. Perhaps the two best forms of treatment are Dexedrine and Ritalin, both of which stimulate the brain.

For mild forms some individuals do well by drinking lots of coffee during the day. The caffeine in coffee is a cerebral stimulant and has actions similar to Dexedrine.

Area Scouts to return from Philmont

POPLAR BLUFF — Four Boy Scouts and Explorers, 14-15-years-old from Sikeston, are winding up activities at Philmont Scout Ranch and Explorer Base in Cimarron, N.M. and will return here Thursday.

The boys are Alan Curry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Curry; Bert Duncan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Duncan, 217 Kramer St.; Rodney Hartlein, son of Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Hartlein, Sikeston Route Two; and Alan Oliver, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Oliver.

They left Poplar Bluff on June 18, and arrived two days later at the ranch. During the time there they hiked on the trails of Philmont, participating in 21 staffed mountain camps.

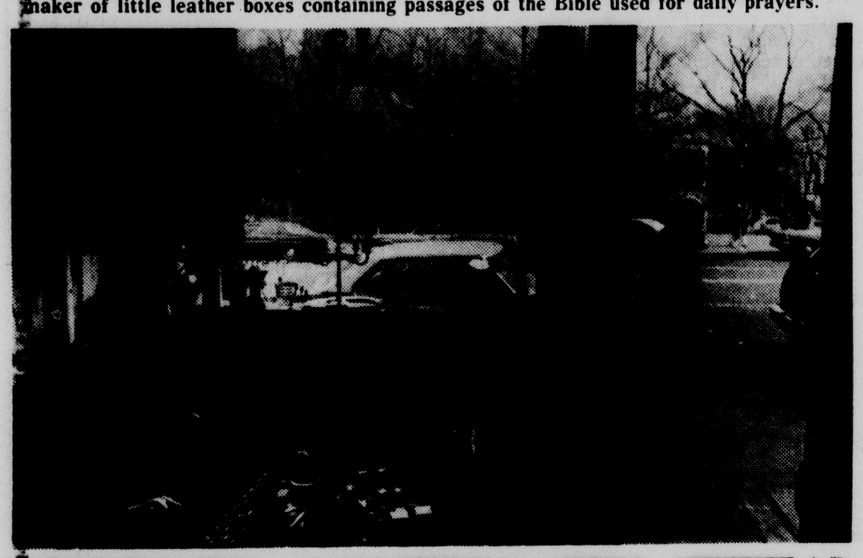
Bicentennial heritage . . .

New York is many cities in one, including the world's largest Jewish city. Highlighting the history of the city's Jewish community, dating back to 1654, the American Jewish Congress is conducting a series of four Bicentennial tours covering past and present activities and centers of Jewish life. Above, Lower East Side tenements and pickle barrels — unchanging scenes in a changing neighborhood. Below, a scribe, the caligrapher of holy documents and maker of little leather boxes containing passages of the Bible used for daily prayers.



STOCKHOLM'S GAMLA STAN (Old Town) will be the scene of a Swedish summer spectacular with the marriage of King Carl XVI Gustav and Silvia Sommerlath in the Cathedral, the tower just to the right of the large square formed by the Royal Palace. To the left of the palace is the Riksdag, the Swedish parliament. Once a fortified island city, Gamla Stan dates back to the middle ages.

UNUSUAL SPECTATORS are par for the course at Grafton, Australia. Some 30 kangaroos living on the fairways over the years have become accustomed to golfers, and vice versa.

OH THE ECSTASY — or is it the agony? — of the performer's art! Liza Minnelli gives her all at a benefit performance in New York honoring producer-dirctor George Abbott.

BONE IS BASIC for spring, and at top are two new styles in soft leather. At left is a step-in pump with wedged heel. At right is T-strap shoe with closed toe, featuring a heavy welted sole with dressmaker stitching. Another spring look is navy, at bottom. Shoe on left has closed toe and back and open shank in the new "baby doll" look. Shoe on right features an open toe and heel and an envelope foldover design on the vamp. All shoes shown have leather soles, which the Sole Leather Council advises for foot comfort and health. (Shoes from Thos. Cort.)

SCRATCHING for existence is the way of life for survivors, human and animal, of earthquake-devastated northeastern Italy. Scene is the village of Venzone.

TAKING time out from the campaign trail to do as thousands of other visitors to the Boardwalk at Atlantic City, N.J., do, Mrs. Jimmy Carter samples a local delicacy.

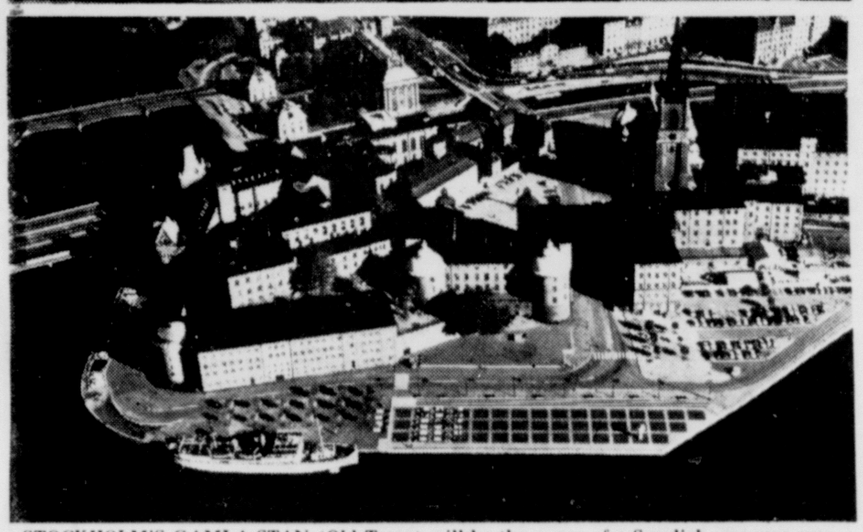
New York is many cities in one, including the world's largest Jewish city. Highlighting the history of the city's Jewish community, dating back to 1654, the American Jewish Congress is conducting a series of four Bicentennial tours covering past and present activities and centers of Jewish life. Above, Lower East Side tenements and pickle barrels — unchanging scenes in a changing neighborhood. Below, a scribe, the caligrapher of holy documents and maker of little leather boxes containing passages of the Bible used for daily prayers.



STOCKHOLM'S GAMLA STAN (Old Town) will be the scene of a Swedish summer spectacular with the marriage of King Carl XVI Gustav and Silvia Sommerlath in the Cathedral, the tower just to the right of the large square formed by the Royal Palace. To the left of the palace is the Riksdag, the Swedish parliament. Once a fortified island city, Gamla Stan dates back to the middle ages.

UNUSUAL SPECTATORS are par for the course at Grafton, Australia. Some 30 kangaroos living on the fairways over the years have become accustomed to golfers, and vice versa.

OH THE ECSTASY — or is it the agony? — of the performer's art! Liza Minnelli gives her all at a benefit performance in New York honoring producer-director George Abbott.

BONE IS BASIC for spring, and at top are two new styles in soft leather. At left is a step-in pump with wedged heel. At right is T-strap shoe with closed toe, featuring a heavy welted sole with dressmaker stitching. Another spring look is navy, at bottom. Shoe on left has closed toe and back and open shank in the new "baby doll" look. Shoe on right features an open toe and heel and an envelope foldover design on the vamp. All shoes shown have leather soles, which the Sole Leather Council advises for foot comfort and health. (Shoes from Thos. Cort.)

SCRATCHING for existence is the way of life for survivors, human and animal, of earthquake-devastated northeastern Italy. Scene is the village of Venzone.

TAKING time out from the campaign trail to do as thousands of other visitors to the Boardwalk at Atlantic City, N.J., do, Mrs. Jimmy Carter samples a local delicacy.

Names in the news!

DALLAS (AP) — Dr. Michael DeBakey says researchers are closing in on cures for many heart diseases. And he says an artificial heart could be available by the turn of the century.

At the convention of the American Medical Association Tuesday, DeBakey said, "The time will come when we find the cause of heart attacks and then we will find the ways to prevent them. We can find ways to cure or relieve 85 to 90 per cent of those with heart disease."

DeBakey, a pioneer in cardiovascular research and surgery, said he had stopped heart transplants because "our data shows they are not worthwhile."

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Susan Ford plans to take another turn behind the camera next winter, this time in a classroom.

The Topeka State Journal reported Tuesday that Miss Ford, daughter of President Ford, plans to enroll in the photojournalism curriculum at the William Allen White School of Journalism at the University of Kansas for the second semester of the 1976-77 academic year.

Rich Clarkson, photo chief of the Topeka Capital-Journal, said Miss Ford will also work part-time as a photographer for the two Topeka daily newspapers while attending the university. She worked as a photo intern for the newspapers in the summer of 1975.

Veto on revisions of campaign practices to have little effect in '76

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christophr S. Bond says his veto of revisions to the Campaign Practices Act will have little effect on this year's elections but it may spur the legislature to act quickly next year.

"I expect that this veto will give the General Assembly an incentive not only to make the necessary revisions in the campaign reporting provisions but also to enact a strong conflict of interest law in 1977," Bond said Tuesday. "I intend to recommend enactment of such a law as a top priority for the next session."

He rejected the proposal, he said, because while it eliminated needless economic disclosure reports for candidates for minor offices, it went too far by severely weakening the disclosure provisions for candidates still covered and by enabling state legislative candidates to avoid making any economic disclosure at all.

Since the measure would not have been effective until after the August primary even if it had been signed, Bond said his veto will have no "practical effect" this year since all candidates have already been required to file the disclosure reports for the primary.

But Bond's veto drew swift criticism from Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick, who has urged complete elimination of economic disclosure from the law so the provisions covering reporting of campaign contributions and expenditures can be adequately enforced.

"Gov. Bond listened to the wrong advice," the state's chief election official said. "Lifting the prying eyes of government from the personal and family finances of a candidate who spends less than $500 on his campaign would have made it easier to find qualified candidates for next spring's city council, school board and special district elections."

But the wording of the bill would have allowed state legislative candidates to avoid such disclosure also, and in 1974 nearly one-third of the 280 candidates for the House and Senate spent less than $500 in their campaigns.

"The people of Missouri intended that candidates for public office, and especially legislative candidates, disclose before each election those matters which might lead to a conflict of interest," Bond said of the voters' action two years ago in adopting the campaign law by a 4-1 margin.

Noting that he had urged lawmakers to adopt a strong conflict of interest bill in the past, Bond said, "The General Assembly has chosen to ignore the importance of this legislation and by passing (the campaign law revision bill) to give notice to the people of Missouri that they do not want a strong conflict of interest law."

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Davis

Frame-Davis

A candlelight wedding was the setting for the double-ring ceremony uniting Deborah Gail Frame and Jerry Russell Davis June 19, at the United Methodist Church at Morehouse. The Rev. Cecil H. Hurt of Senath officiated.

Parents of the couple are Rev. and Mrs. J. Carl Frame of Morehouse and Mrs. Velma Davis and the late Russell A. Davis of Sikeston.

The bride's dress of white organza and Alencon lace had a fitted bodice with high-rise waist and sweetheart neckline, bishop sleeves and wide cuffs. Lace accented the bodice, neck and waist with scattered motifs on the sleeves. A full circle skirt swept to a chapel train and was scattered with lace motifs. The neckline, cuffs and hemline of the gown were edged in scalloped Venice lace. A full length cathedral veil held by a lace and pearl Camelot cap was edged in scalloped Venice lace.

Mrs. Steve Matthews of Sikeston was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Bill Deane IV of Sikeston and Mrs. Mike LeGrand of Benton.

Best man was David Sloan of Sikeston. Groomsmen were John Brawner of Pollard, Ark., and Ron Hurley of Tupelo, Miss.

Ushers and candle-lighters were Bill Deane IV and Mark Deane of Sikeston.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Linda Allen of Lilbourn, and bridesmaids were Necie Cooper and Cheryl Tanner, both of New Madrid.

The bride chose a gown of sheer nylon over acetate taffeta with a full-length chapel train attached. The gown was trimmed with ruffled nylon and acetate Chantilly lace and sequins. GEM EMBROIDERY

If you have a small treasure you'd like to show off, why not incorporate it into your next embroidery and let your stitches create an unusual setting for it?

Whether it's a small semi-precious stone, an antique coin, a shimmering fragment of shell, a bit of glass or mirror, you can create a special embroidery design around it. In "Creative Canvas Work" I demonstrated how this is done in a pattern which uses semi-precious stones from Brazil as integral parts of the design.

I used cloisonne thread, which you might like to consider because the gold or silver of the cloisonne is very effective as a setting. Another plus: the elasticity of this thread is very helpful. Once you've mastered the technique you'll want to experiment with other threads.

It's best to work on canvas if your stone or glass is fairly heavy since canvas has more body. Slim coins and lightweight bits of shell can be done on linen.

First, trace the shape of the gem on your canvas. Outline this shape in simple Tent stitch. Now go around the traced shape, working over the Tent stitches and putting a row of Buttonhole stitches through the canvas. Your needle should go toward the center of the space all the way around.

Sometimes you'll be going over the Tent stitches, sometimes you'll be crossing them in order to have your Buttonhole stitches evenly spaced. When you've completed the shape, you will have a perfectly spaced, smooth row of Buttonhole stitches to build on.

The next row of Buttonhole stitches will be sewn into the first row and NOT into the canvas so your setting will start to build up. Do two, three or four rows more in similar fashion. How many rows you'll need to form a little setting of tight and orderly stitches will depend on the thickness of the stone or coin.

Place the gem into the setting and work around it the number of rounds you think are most effective, each time pulling the thread a little tighter so your setting holds its treasure securely. Remember always to stitch into the previous row. When you've finished do a single row of Overcast stitch. This will pull your setting in very tightly and give it a smooth, finished look.

I find gem embroidery a delightful way to use small treasures, whether they're of sentimental or material value. This way you can see and enjoy them instead of keeping them hidden away in a drawer.

Dear Elsa,

How can I tell whether canvas for needlepoint is "good" canvas? It all looks the same to me.

C.K.J.

Dear C.K.J.,

The best canvas is made of strong, polished thread. A very dull finish may indicate the use of a good deal of starch or inferior cotton thread. Either of these make a rough canvas which is difficult to pull your yarn through and often causes it to fray. Test the individual threads of a canvas; if they break easily, it's not good canvas. For embroidery designs of heirloom quality I always suggest using linen canvas.

Cooking up

By CHERIE BLANTON

Let's concentrate on vegetables this week. I often think they can be the best part of a meal and yet I think they are the one thing we frequently end up being in a rut about.

BROCCOLI CASSEROLE

2 pkgs. frozen broccoli, cooked and drained.
Saute in butter:
½ cup chopped onion and another of celery
½ cup each of mushroom and chicken soup
½ cup cooked rice
4 oz. cheese spread

Mix above and bake at 300 degrees for 1 hour.

SPINACH CASSEROLE

2 pkg. frozen chopped spinach, cooked and drained
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup grated cheese
3 tbs. grated onion
1 can cream of mushroom soup
½ cup mayonnaise

Mix all ingredients. Bake in greased casserole at 375 degrees for 30 min. Top with buttered bread crumbs at the last of the cooking period so they may brown.

FRIED ZUCCHINI SQUASH

1 egg
½ cup milk

Beat egg and milk together. Set aside.

Combine:
½ cup flour
¼ cup Parmesan cheese
¼ tsp. pepper and salt

Dip squash slices into egg mixture, then in flour. Fry in butter until brown.

NOODLES ALFREDO

¼ cup salt
8-12 qts. boiling water
1 pound softened butter (do not substitute)
4 cups grated Parmesan cheese
1 cup heavy cream at room temperature
16 cups medium egg noodles

Put salt into boiling water. Gradually add noodles and cook until tender. Drain. Place butter in hot 4 qt. casserole, add noodles and toss gently. Add cheese and toss again. Pour in cream and toss. Sprinkle with freshly ground pepper and serve at once.

Starting July 7, the Cooking Up column will have a new format — no more recipes, but lots of intrigue! Don't miss the first installment of "Sticks and Stones May Break Your Bones."

Meet Troy, a middle- aged widow who has a bad habit of sticking her nose in unwanted places.

Visit with her at Rainbows End, the old Kentucky homestead which still holds its secret of a treasure buried there prior to the Civil War, and discover with her what lurks in the shadows around the old conservatory once night has fallen.

Remember, July 7 — you won't want to miss Cherie's latest confection.

DEAR POLLY — Carol N.'s small boys might make scissors cases out of paper towel rolls as my father does. He wraps them with scraps of colored yarn going from one end to the other and a length across one open end makes the hanger. This is a decorative answer to the where to keep the scissors problem. Nice for small gifts and favors, too. — DENISE.

DEAR POLLY — I solved the problem of keeping my embroidery hoops hung on heavy crewel work such as the satin stitch, by using narrow adhesive bandages loosely wrapped around the hoops. They fill in the bare spaces on the cloth and they have just enough give to keep the cloth in the hoops smooth and tight. — LEILA.

New payroll procedures are ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — New procedures ordered by House Democrats to prevent payroll and expense account abuses are being implemented amid a fight over whether the full House will get a chance to say anything about the changes.

Democratic leaders met Monday night to discuss whether to have the full House consider the revisions, but they reached no decision.

Republicans planned to review the issue today. Some 106 GOP members have accused the Democrats of trying to ram through the revisions.

The House Administration Committee approved the new procedures Monday. They will take effect as committee regulations when published in the Congressional Record, probably on Wednesday.

But committee Chairman Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., said that if the House considers the reforms and rejects any of them, the committee would be obliged to follow the House's will.

The revisions were ordered by the House Democratic Caucus last week after alleged abuses, including the charge that Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, put Elizabeth Ray on the Administration Committee payroll as his mistress and that nine House members collected travel money to which they were not entitled.

Hays has admitted having a "personal relationship" with Miss Ray but says she was hired to do committee work.

Among other things, the revisions, would:

—Require all House members to certify each month their employes' duties, pay and relationship with their employer. A public accounting would be released every three months.

—Abolish congressmen's ability to draw up to $11,000 in cash a year for travel and stationery.

—Require that documented vouchers be submitted by members for all expenses and provide that an accounting of every member's expenses be released publicly every three months.

One reform which the Democratic Caucus ordered to be considered by the full House would strip the Administration Committee of the power former chairman Hays won for it in 1971 to increase members' expense allowances.

In approving that resolution last Friday, the Administration Committee defied caucus orders and tacked all of the other reforms onto it so the House would be able to consider them all, not just one.

When the committee considered another resolution Monday giving the House the ability to take back the authority Hays won, the panel voted 12 to 10 to also tack all the reforms onto it.

But the committee failed on a tie 11 to 11 vote to report out the new resolution. Thompson said the panel left it up to the Rules Committee whether to send the House a resolution giving members final say on all the changes or a resolution which he interpreted as letting them decide only the issue of removing power from the Administration Committee.

Commission tightens rulings on fund-raising

The Missouri Elections Commission last week tightened an earlier ruling on political fund-raising committees of corporations and labor unions in an attempt to keep such spending under the limits of the state's campaign finance law.

The earlier rule would have allowed a labor union or corporation to set up more than one committee to do its political work and would have allowed each of those committees to spend up to the limit set for such committees.

The new version of that rule allows any number of committees to be formed, but the committees together must spend no more in total than the present limit for one committee. That limit is $10,000 or up to 20 per cent of a candidate's total limit, whichever is less.

Common Cause of Missouri opposed the original rule but favored the change finally adopted. It said the original rule would have allowed corporations and labor unions to circumvent the limit by creating more committees.

New payroll procedures are ordered

WASHINGTON (AP) — New procedures ordered by House Democrats to prevent payroll and expense account abuses are being implemented amid a fight over whether the full House will get a chance to say anything about the changes.

Democratic leaders met Monday night to discuss whether to have the full House consider the revisions, but they reached no decision.

Republicans planned to review the issue today. Some 106 GOP members have accused the Democrats of trying to ram through the revisions.

The House Administration Committee approved the new procedures Monday. They will take effect as committee regulations when published in the Congressional Record, probably on Wednesday.

But committee Chairman Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., said that if the House considers the reforms and rejects any of them, the committee would be obliged to follow the House's will.

The revisions were ordered by the House Democratic Caucus last week after alleged abuses, including the charge that Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, put Elizabeth Ray on the Administration Committee payroll as his mistress and that nine House members collected travel money to which they were not entitled.

Hays has admitted having a "personal relationship" with Miss Ray but says she was hired to do committee work.

Among other things, the revisions, would:

—Require all House members to certify each month their employes' duties, pay and relationship with their employer. A public accounting would be released every three months.

—Abolish congressmen's ability to draw up to $11,000 in cash a year for travel and stationery.

—Require that documented vouchers be submitted by members for all expenses and provide that an accounting of every member's expenses be released publicly every three months.

One reform which the Democratic Caucus ordered to be considered by the full House would strip the Administration Committee of the power former chairman Hays won for it in 1971 to increase members' expense allowances.

In approving that resolution last Friday, the Administration Committee defied caucus orders and tacked all of the other reforms onto it so the House would be able to consider them all, not just one.

When the committee considered another resolution Monday giving the House the ability to take back the authority Hays won, the panel voted 12 to 10 to also tack all the reforms onto it.

But the committee failed on a tie 11 to 11 vote to report out the new resolution. Thompson said the panel left it up to the Rules Committee whether to send the House a resolution giving members final say on all the changes or a resolution which he interpreted as letting them decide only the issue of removing power from the Administration Committee.

Commission tightens rulings on fund-raising

The Missouri Elections Commission last week tightened an earlier ruling on political fund-raising committees of corporations and labor unions in an attempt to keep such spending under the limits of the state's campaign finance law.

The earlier rule would have allowed a labor union or corporation to set up more than one committee to do its political work and would have allowed each of those committees to spend up to the limit set for such committees.

The new version of that rule allows any number of committees to be formed, but the committees together must spend no more in total than the present limit for one committee. That limit is $10,000 or up to 20 per cent of a candidate's total limit, whichever is less.

Common Cause of Missouri opposed the original rule but favored the change finally adopted. It said the original rule would have allowed corporations and labor unions to circumvent the limit by creating more committees.

Movement to feed the world slowed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A report by the Agriculture Department says that the so-called Green Revolution heralded a few years ago as a scientific movement to feed the world has slowed perceptibly but that improved, high-yielding varieties of food grains still hold promise for accomplishing their goals.

But the department's Economic Research Service said that individual countries — mainly the poor ones — will have to assume a greater role in helping smaller farmers get enough fertilizer and water to use the new food-producing technology.

Haldore Hanson, director general of the International Wheat and Maize Improvement Center in Mexico, where scientists first developed high-yielding semi-dwarf wheat varieties, say in the agency's report that "even without expanding acreage, the world can double its food production by the year 2000, to match the expected doubling of its population."

In the early 1970s, the use of the new "miracle" wheat and rice seed for planting rose about 18 per cent a year. But by 1974-75, the acreage devoted to those seeds expanded only eight per cent. The report said that fertilizer shortages and high prices probably were the main reason for the slowdown.

The report, included in "Farm Index" published today by the department, said scientists at the center in Mexico and at the International Rice Research Institute in the Philippines still are working to improve grain varieties, hopefully so that they can be adapted to more areas of the world where hunger is a lingering problem or threat.

"Some critics contend that because high-yielding varieties require relatively high levels of fertilizer and water for maximum yield the small, poor farmers of the developing world are being left behind," the report said.

Despite the higher yields, the improved wheat varieties still account for only 38 per cent of all wheat planted in the less-developed countries of Asia and the Near East, and the new rice varieties account for only 26 per cent, the report said.

Prime farm land production receives cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz has announced a new policy intended to help reduce the amount of prime farm land being taken out of agricultural production.

Butz said Monday that "the loss of prime lands well-suited to the production of food, forage and timber is a matter of concern to the nation" and that long-term needs must be considered.

Thus, he said in a statement, the Agriculture Department "will urge all federal agencies to adopt the policy that federal activities that take prime agricultural land should be carried out only when there are no suitable alternative sites and when the activity meets and overriding public need."

The department also will work with private organizations and groups "to urge protection of prime lands from premature or unnecessary conversion" to non-agricultural uses.

"Land use alternatives are generally available that can minimize the impact on prime lands, and such alternatives should be explored carefully, particularly where federal funds are involved and when prime lands will be irrevocably committed to non-agricultural uses," the announcement said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz continues to say that imports of low-grade foreign beef this year will stay below a maximum level that would trigger strict quotas.

Butz said Monday that "agreements in principle" have been reached with major supplying countries — Australia and New Zealand are the largest — to hold meat shipments to 1,233 million pounds in calendar 1976.

That is 10 million pounds short of a "trigger" level that would mean quotas for the remainder of the year.

Under law, Butz is required to estimate the imports of meat for all of the calendar year. If any estimate reaches the trigger level, the law specifies quotas shall be imposed.

Thus, with the latest quarterly estimate remaining below the trigger point, quotas are not being proclaimed at this time.

Bill is okayed to stop increase in income taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — With little time to spare, the House gave final congressional approval today to a bill protecting Americans for another two months against a $15-billion-a-year increase in income taxes.

The House agreed unanimously to send President Ford a Senate-passed tax-cut extension freezing payroll withholding rates for income taxes at current levels until Sept. 1. Ford is on record in favor of an even-larger tax cut.

Without the extension, the package of antirecession tax cuts enacted last year expires at midnight Wednesday, meaning higher taxes for virtually every family and, the experts say, a heavy blow to the economy.

Creating jobs, upping exports

Multinationals make good citizens

By F. Perry Wilson

The multinational corporation has become a favorite "whipping boy" of many in and out of the government in the U.S. and worldwide. Among the charges leveled against multinationals are that they export jobs from the United States and they don't pay their fair share of taxes.

These charges are not true of most U.S. companies. Our own company recently completed a study of our international operations which shows that we (1) bear a heavy tax burden, (2) create rather than export jobs, and (3) help rather than harm the U.S. economy.

A key point in understanding multinational corporations is that for the most part they would rather not be multinational — they would rather not operate plants in foreign countries. Most multinationals would much prefer to avoid the risks of overseas investment and serve overseas customers through exports.

When then do we make investments abroad?

The reasons can be found by briefly tracing how our business in foreign countries begins and grows. Foreign demand for most products usually begins with unsolicited orders. As demand grows, an independent agent is usually appointed in the country involved; then, with further growth, we send our own marketing representatives to better promote export sales.

If the market in that foreign country or area continues to grow, it eventually reaches a point where it could support its own production facilities. At that point, the American exporter has two choices: to give up the foreign market in which he has invested a good deal of time and money, or install a manufacturing operations within that market.

Should the American company not build, one of its many foreign competitors will be happy to fill the void and supply the market. If it gives up the market, it loses exports and gains nothing.

If a U.S. company invests in a foreign country, it initially loses exports from the U.S. in that particular product area, but it preserves its share of that product market and gains exports in allied, intermediate and accessory products that are not manufactured in the new foreign plant. This loss of exports of the specific product of the new plant is more than offset by the resultant increase in U.S. exports of related products.

Just what does this decision to invest abroad mean to the American economy and the American worker? I believe it means a sounder economy and more jobs at home. In Union Carbide's experience, I know it means that. We found that foreign investment "pulls" exports from the United States, so much so that we export more now than we would have if we hadn't invested overseas. This is primarily because of the presence of strong, local organizations which, being on the scene, can provide a broader, more effective overall marketing effort than can a remote export marketing organization.

In 1974, the most recent year we have studied, 56 per cent of our exports were to our foreign affiliated companies; and our exports to foreign markets where we have manufacturing facilities tend to be at a higher level and have grown as fast as exports to areas where we have no manufacturing investment.

One exercise we did in this study was to find out what levels our exports would have reached if we had kept overseas manufacturing capacity at its 1951 levels (the earliest year for which we have comparable statistics). Without the "pull" effect of our later overseas investments, our 1974 exports would have been $304 million. Actually, however, our 1974 exports totalled $466 million, a benefit of $162 million attributable to overseas investment.

Our exports create 7,300 U.S. jobs, or 13 per cent of our domestic total. Without foreign investment, there would be only 4,800 export related jobs. And we have never had layoffs as a result of our opening a foreign facility.

I believe these experiences are typical of multinational companies. It doesn't take an economist to see that such a gain in exports will have a positive effect on our economy, employment and the balance of payments. Our foreign investment and the exports it pulls resulted in our making a positive contribution to the U.S. balance of payments of $77 million in 1974.

A charge unrelated to such economics is that multinationals evade U.S. taxes by operating overseas. This is inaccurate. Tax law is such that multinationals must declare profits on overseas operations and take a credit for taxes paid overseas. The foreign tax credit isn't a loophole, but rather part of a worldwide system that gives primary taxing authority to the government within whose jurisdiction the income is earned.

A good parallel might be drawn by looking at the thousands of American commuters who work in one state and live in another. They receive a credit in their home state for the taxes paid to the state in which they earn income.

Foreign corporate tax rates are on the average as high as U.S. rates. From 1966 to 1974, our foreign operations were taxed at a 47 per cent rate, compared with the U.S. statutory rate of 48 per cent.

Multinationals have been extraordinarily successful in meeting the needs of the consumers of the world. That success has attracted a good deal of attention. If multinationals have failed in any way, it has been in articulating their contributions to nation-state economies. We aren't perfect, but we are better citizens than we are being given credit for.

Illegitimate children to receive Social Security benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that illegitimate children need not be treated the same as legitimate children in determining whether they are eligible for Social Security benefits.

By a vote of 6-3 the court upheld a federal law requiring illegitimate offspring to prove in most cases that their father lived with them or supported them at the time of his death.

In other action, the court ruled that the Fifth Amendment does not protect criminal defendants from having their personal business records seized by authorities who possess a proper search warrant.

The Fifth Amendment provides that defendants may not be forced to incriminate themselves.

On illegitimacy, the court ruled in cases from Maryland and Rhode Island in which the distinction was challenged on behalf of illegitimate children whose fathers have died.

In rejecting the challenge, the court refused for the second week in a row to extend the same strict constitutional scrutiny with which it examines race discriminaton to other forms of discrimination.

Last week, the court said the strict scrutiny standard need not be met to justify a Massachusetts law requiring state policemen to retire at the age of 50.

Today the court said the standard did not apply to laws which distinguished between legitimate and illegitimate children.

"Perhaps in part because the roots of the discrimination rest in the conduct of the parents rather than the child, and perhaps in part because illegitimacy does not carry an obvious badge, as race or sex do, this discrimination against illegitimates has never approached the severity of pervasiveness of the historic legal and political discrimination against women and Negroes," Justice Harry A. Blackmun said for the court.

Actually, the court never has ruled that sex discrimination is governed by the stricter constitutional standards.

43 million Americans are expected to move in '76

The summer months, with the closing of schools in June, bring on the big rush of moving activity in the U.S. and 1976 will be no exception. If anything, it should be intensified.

Moving experts are predicting that by December 31 about 43 million Americans will be living somewhere other than the residence they occupied on January 1, 1976.

John B. Smith, president of Aero Mayflower Transit Company, one of the country's leading household goods moving organizations, said he looks for a record year in moving in 1976, and for a variety of reasons.

"Many companies which have had a moratorium on transferring their employees, or had greatly reduced the number of such transfers, are beginning to lift these restrictions," Smith said. "This will mean a greatly increased number of long-distance moves during the second half of the year."

Summer Rush

Historically, between 55% and 70% of all household moving takes place between May and September, Smith noted.

"Construction of new homes sets off a chain reaction," Smith pointed out. "One family moves into the new home, and another moves into the house they vacated, and so on down the line."

A third reason for an anticipated upsurge in moving activity, Smith said, is the improved economy. "The signs are good for a full recovery which means more jobs and more movement of people to occupy these jobs," said Smith.

Of course, Americans have always been a mobile people and there is nothing to suggest that this characteristic is about to change. But while people remain as mobile as ever, their migratory habits in recent years seem to be changing. People aren't thronging to the big cities and their sprawling suburban communities like they were during the two decades immediately following World War II.

8 Losing Population

Time magazine in a recent article pointed out that of the 16 major metropolitan areas with populations of 2 million or more, eight have lost population since 1970.

Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. I work in a corporation public relations department and about once a week, as part of my job, I must speak to area civic or business groups on developments in my company or its industry. A night's round trip can sometimes total nearly 100 miles. Since the company does not reimburse me for my car expenses for these trips, can I deduct them from my income tax?

A. Your automobile expenses to and from your speaking engagements and meetings can be deducted if they are considered a necessary and ordinary part of your job.

You may choose to compute the actual operating expenses, such as gas, oil, parking and tolls, or you may use the standard mileage rate of 15 cents per mile for the first 15,000 miles of business use and 10 cents for each additional mile. Parking fees and tolls are deductible in addition to the standard mileage rate.

Whichever method you choose, be sure to keep records which establish the actual operating expenses you incur or the actual business miles you drive. The records should include your destination and the reasons for the travel.

You may deduct these expenses on line 39 of Form 1040. For more information, see IRS Publication 463, Travel, Entertainment and Gift Expenses, available at local IRS offices.

Carter's funding is broad based

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — So many people have asked me of late "Who is backing Jimmy Carter — where's his money coming from?" that I went over to the Federal Election Commission to see what reports were on file.

Here, too, the answers were vague. The Carter reports, like those of other leading presidential candidates, contained few donors listing their specific business connections. Many were listed only by name, address and size of donation. Most others were too vague to be of much use.

Nevertheless, an interesting pattern developed. To one reading through the lists of $100-and-up donors, the number of attorneys giving sizable amounts seemed extraordinarily large in comparison with other candidates. There were noticeable numbers of publishers, operators or owners of newspapers and radio stations. Stock brokers, real estate developers. Contractors and builders.

There was an interesting sprinkling of college professors and some obviously well-heeled students on the big donor lists.

There seemed to be a scarcity of donors who, for the record, classified themselves as businessmen or business executives. Or small independent oil operators, a listing which showed up frequently among Reagan Texas donors.

A spot check indicated that various members of the law firm of Lipshutz, Macey, Zusman and Sikes, of Atlanta, and their families, gave upwards of $9,300 to the campaign. Robert J. Lipshutz was listed in the reports as the Carter campaign treasurer.

Jimmy Carter and his immediate family gave upwards of $32,000 in the early reports, the latest figures not being in, including a donation of $17.70 from small daughter Amy, $13,000 from wife Rosalynn and $18,200 from Carter himself. Later reports, when they come in, could raise these figures, of course.

On the $100-and-over lists available, which, as noted above, are not up-to-date, there was a singular paucity of well-known names. There were some, of course. Dean Rusk, former secretary of State, was there. And C. D. Dillon, former secretary of the Treasury and under secretary of State: Henry Luce, vice president of Time, Inc.; Cyrus Eaton, the controversial financier of Arcadia Farms; Burt Lancaster, the actor; Frank Ikard, president of the American Petroleum Institute, James Latham, president of the Transcontinental Oil; Joseph F. Cullman, 3rd, chairman of the Board and chief executive officer of Phillip Morris, Inc; Irving Shepard, president of Chromalloy American; James D. Maddox, of Rome Ga.; Ted Ashley, a motion picture executive with Warner Brothers; Robert Wise, producer of "The Sound of Music," "West Side Story" and "The Andromeda Strain"; publisher Bernard Geis. A University of Connecticut student gave $1,000, a union organizer $500.

A number of political funds were represented — the Olin (chemicals) Political Fund, the Southern Railway Good Government Fund, the Non Partisan League of Machinists and political funds sponsored by Pacific Lighting (utility), Chevron and Conoco (petroleum), the Committee of Quality Government, the Better Government Committee of New York City, the AFSCME.

A routine check of the Carter dollar sources thus reveals no sinister or even worrisome pattern of financial backing. On the surface, at least, it would appear that those giving to the campaign represent a fairly widespread and representative section of the voting population.

"Construction of new homes sets off a chain reaction," Smith pointed out. "One family moves into the new home, and another moves into the house they vacated, and so on down the line."

A third reason for an anticipated upsurge in moving activity, Smith said, is the improved economy. "The signs are good for a full recovery which means more jobs and more movement of people to occupy these jobs," said Smith.

Of course, Americans have always been a mobile people and there is nothing to suggest that this characteristic is about to change. But while people remain as mobile as ever, their migratory habits in recent years seem to be changing. People aren't thronging to the big cities and their sprawling suburban communities like they were during the two decades immediately following World War II.

8 Losing Population

Time magazine in a recent article pointed out that of the 16 major metropolitan areas with populations of 2 million or more, eight have lost population since 1970.

Touching a pig on New Year's Eve is good luck in Hungary where Budapest restaurant parties sometimes turn into a wild scramble when a live pig is turned loose at midnight.

Taxpayers Ask IRS

This column of questions and answers on federal tax matters is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service to taxpayers. The column answers questions most frequently asked by taxpayers.

Q. I work in a corporation public relations department and about once a week, as part of my job, I must speak to area civic or business groups on developments in my company or its industry. A night's round trip can sometimes total nearly 100 miles. Since the company does not reimburse me for my car expenses for these trips, can I deduct them from my income tax?

A. Your automobile expenses to and from your speaking engagements and meetings can be deducted if they are considered a necessary and ordinary part of your job.

You may choose to compute the actual operating expenses, such as gas, oil, parking and tolls, or you may use the standard mileage rate of 15 cents per mile for the first 15,000 miles of business use and 10 cents for each additional mile. Parking fees and tolls are deductible in addition to the standard mileage rate.

Whichever method you choose, be sure to keep records which establish the actual operating expenses you incur or the actual business miles you drive. The records should include your destination and the reasons for the travel.

You may deduct these expenses on line 39 of Form 1040. For more information, see IRS Publication 463, Travel, Entertainment and Gift Expenses, available at local IRS offices.

Carter's funding is broad based

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — So many people have asked me of late "Who is backing Jimmy Carter — where's his money coming from?" that I went over to the Federal Election Commission to see what reports were on file.

Here, too, the answers were vague. The Carter reports, like those of other leading presidential candidates, contained few donors listing their specific business connections. Many were listed only by name, address and size of donation. Most others were too vague to be of much use.

Nevertheless, an interesting pattern developed. To one reading through the lists of $100-and-up donors, the number of attorneys giving sizable amounts seemed extraordinarily large in comparison with other candidates. There were noticeable numbers of publishers, operators or owners of newspapers and radio stations. Stock brokers, real estate developers. Contractors and builders.

There was an interesting sprinkling of college professors and some obviously well-heeled students on the big donor lists.

There seemed to be a scarcity of donors who, for the record, classified themselves as businessmen or business executives. Or small independent oil operators, a listing which showed up frequently among Reagan Texas donors.

A spot check indicated that various members of the law firm of Lipshutz, Macey, Zusman and Sikes, of Atlanta, and their families, gave upwards of $9,300 to the campaign. Robert J. Lipshutz was listed in the reports as the Carter campaign treasurer.

Jimmy Carter and his immediate family gave upwards of $32,000 in the early reports, the latest figures not being in, including a donation of $17.70 from small daughter Amy, $13,000 from wife Rosalynn and $18,200 from Carter himself. Later reports, when they come in, could raise these figures, of course.

On the $100-and-over lists available, which, as noted above, are not up-to-date, there was a singular paucity of well-known names. There were some, of course. Dean Rusk, former secretary of State, was there. And C. D. Dillon, former secretary of the Treasury and under secretary of State: Henry Luce, vice president of Time, Inc.; Cyrus Eaton, the controversial financier of Arcadia Farms; Burt Lancaster, the actor; Frank Ikard, president of the American Petroleum Institute, James Latham, president of the Transcontinental Oil; Joseph F. Cullman, 3rd, chairman of the Board and chief executive officer of Phillip Morris, Inc; Irving Shepard, president of Chromalloy American; James D. Maddox, of Rome Ga.; Ted Ashley, a motion picture executive with Warner Brothers; Robert Wise, producer of "The Sound of Music," "West Side Story" and "The Andromeda Strain"; publisher Bernard Geis. A University of Connecticut student gave $1,000, a union organizer $500.

A number of political funds were represented — the Olin (chemicals) Political Fund, the Southern Railway Good Government Fund, the Non Partisan League of Machinists and political funds sponsored by Pacific Lighting (utility), Chevron and Conoco (petroleum), the Committee of Quality Government, the Better Government Committee of New York City, the AFSCME.

A routine check of the Carter dollar sources thus reveals no sinister or even worrisome pattern of financial backing. On the surface, at least, it would appear that those giving to the campaign represent a fairly widespread and representative section of the voting population.

Up, up and away!

Karl Thomas, 27, of Troy, Mich. takes off in his helium-filled balloon from Lakehurst Naval Air base, Lakehurst, N.J. Friday night after some 15 days delay because of the weather. Thomas' goal is to drift across the Atlantic and eventually land in Paris.

(AP Wirephoto)

Balloonist is behind schedule

NEW YORK (AP) — Karl Thomas is estimated to be more than 1,200 miles out to sea today and flying behind schedule on his mission to make the first transatlantic voyage in a balloon.

The estimate was made by Thomas' ground crew, despite its not having heard from the 27-year-old balloonist for 24 hours. The crew said Thomas was probably conserving power by limiting transmissions.

Paul Johnson, the flight director, said if there is no contact with Thomas by 8 a.m. today, the flight team would again consider asking authorities to initiate a special watch for the balloonist. Earlier, such a watch was held after no radio contact with Thomas for 19 hours.

Wally Clayton, a spokesman for the "Spirit of '76" flight, said good weather was reported in the estimated position of the helium-filled balloon and Thomas was believed to be entering a busier air traffic corridor.

Thomas was last heard from at 10:43 p.m. EDT Sunday when an Alitalia New York-Rome flight picked up his radio signal. The airline said his voice was calm and did not indicate anything amiss. But efforts by the plane to engage Thomas in a two-way conversation failed.

Word of the voice contact was greeted with jubilation by Thomas' ground crew in its communications headquarters in an apartment here.

"We were very much concerned," crew member Robert Charlton said. "It's quite obvious now Karl has problems with electronics, but we're still optimistic that he will make it."

Johnson said Thomas' position at 8 p.m. Monday was estimated to be 1,200 miles east of New York City. He said the trip is taking longer than planned, probably because of thunderstorms, and that it would be at least Thursday before the balloon reaches its destination, Paris.

Conservationists have declared a 'whale war' on the west coast

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A group of conservationists has gone to sea to battle bow-to-bow with Soviet ships to try to stop the killing of sperm whales.

"Once we find them, we'll stay with them," declared Byrd Baker, a leader of 10 crewmen from the ecology-minded town of Mendocino, Calif., population 1,500.

"We hope the Russians don't come after the whales. But if they come, we'll have to get between their harpooning cannons and the whales to save some lives," he said.

The conservationists' journey is the latest tactic in what they call the "whale war." Earlier, they used a woman dubbed Mendocino Rose, who in a sultry voice urged Soviet whaler crewmen to defect.

Baker and his fellow whale lovers embarked Monday in the 82-foot Phyllis Carmack to rendezvous about 100 miles north of San Francisco with the 153-foot James Bay, crewed by 18 Canadians who interfered with Russian whale-killing last year. They plan to patrol the Pacific protecting the sperm whales which feed there this time of year.

The conservation forces have, besides their "whale navy" of the two leased boats, a "whale air force" of spotter planes. The Mendocino contingent six months ago launched a town boycott of Japanese and Russian goods to halt the killing of whales, which they say sometimes occurs within the 12-mile territorial limit.

But their secret weapon was a marine radio broadcast featuring a Russian-speaking Tokyo Rose-type propagandist who cooed, "Hello, Soviet whalers. This is Octobriana, speaking to you from the former Imperial Russian Colony of California." Promising the best of treatment, she urged Russian mariners to stop slaughtering the huge marine mammals and to defect to the United States.

Accuracy questioned on government economics

NEW YORK (AP) — Doubts about the accuracy of official government economic indicators exists among what appears to be a growing number of concerned Americans, including economists and even government officials.

Revisions, changes in concepts, weighting and seasonal adjusting help raise the doubts, as does what would seem to be an element of human expectation in interpreting or announcing the figures.

In January, for example, just days prior to the Gross National Product report for the final quarter of 1975, a government official indicated the rate might be as high as 7 per cent, in marked contrast to some private forecasts of a 4 to 5 per cent increase.

The actual figure turned out to be 5.4 per cent — strong, but not nearly so strong as that projected by the official, alluded to in some other statements by officials, and circulated widely by the media.

The inflation rate, as measured by the GNP deflator, was reported at 6.5 per cent, which was called an improvement over the revised 7.1 per cent rate for the previous quarter — originally announced at 5 per cent.

But even as the encouraging figures for the third-quarter GNP were revised earlier, so were the fourth-quarter figures destined for the same fate this February. GNP growth was lowered to 4.9 per cent; the inflation rate was upped to 6.8 per cent.

Revisions continue in the name of greater accuracy. Some advances may appear even larger because comparison figures for the preceding periods were simultaneously revised downward, often with very little notice made.

In May of this year the Commerce Department announced that April retail sales were almost unchanged from March. But that statement could be made only after a downward revision of the March gain, from 2.8 per cent to 1.3 per cent.

The potential impact of such revisions, unintentional though it might be, could be to produce the impression of a series of vigorous advances when in fact the advances were moderate.

The search for refinements, which consequently results in revisions, almost never ends. The well-known Index of Leading Indicators, a barometer of things to come, is revised each month; that is, even though it is a forecast tool, the index for each month is revised each month, month after month.

To illustrate, the index for June 1975 was announced in July 1975 as having advanced 2.10 per cent. Thereafter it was revised during 1975 to read 3.22 per cent, 3.30 per cent, 3.52 per cent and 3.60 per cent.

The highest figure occurred in both November and December and may have been, as were several figures in that period, overstated.

Smiling faces

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today its index designed to show future economic trends jumped 1.4 per cent in May, the fastest rate of increase in 10 months.

The increase put the index of leading indicators, a composite of a dozen statistics selected to foreshadow the future, 13 per cent ahead of where it was a year ago, the Commerce Department said.

However, administration economists have said they expect the nation's total economic output, or Gross National Product, for the current three-month period to grow at an annual rate of less than 5 per cent.

That would be well below the annual rate of 8.7 per cent registered in the first three months of the year.

The May jump in the leading indicators was the biggest monthly increase since 2.8 per cent last July. It doubled the increase of seven-tenths of a per cent in April, revised downward from an original 1.1 per cent.

The Commerce Department said of 12 components in the index, six advanced, two were unchanged, three declined and one was not available in time to be included.

The volume of new orders, up 5.2 per cent in May, exerted the biggest upward push on the index, the department said. The orders for consumer products were received by manufacturers and suppliers.

Other factors exerting an upward influence were a longer average work week, a faster growth in cash held by consumers and business, higher prices for key wholesale commodities, faster formation of new businesses and a greater volume of new building permits issued.

The largest factor holding back the index was the volume of contracts and orders received by manufacturers and suppliers of factories and their facilities. That component declined 1.9 per cent.

Also moving downward were stock prices and the size of the money supply after adjustment for inflation.

Unchanged where the layoff rate in manufacturing and the ease with which companies obtain supplies.

The pace of deliveries of supplies is taken as an indicator of demand in the economy, so that slower deliveries mean higher demand.

Lying in State

The practice of public display of the corpse of a dead monarch or highly placed official originated in Anglo-Saxon times and arose from political considerations since accession to the throne frequently became the subject of contention. This ceremonial showing of the monarch's corpse demonstrated he had died a more or less natural death and had not been abducted.

Disclosure law aids in argument

JEFFERSON CITY — The state Supreme Court's ruling last Monday upholding the requirements that candidates for public office in Missouri disclose their sources of personal income has settled a recent argument.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond has on his desk a bill which would substantially weaken those reporting requirements of the 1974 campaign finance bill, but even if he signs it, it won't take effect until Aug. 13.

And the deadline for disclosing such personal financial information was last week. Only the Supreme Court stood between the requirement and some recalcitrant candidates.

So candidates' personal finances will be disclosed in this election year and in much greater detail than is likely in future years because the General Assembly seems likely to eventually modify that reporting requirement whether Bond signs the current legislation or not.

This is not the end of litigation over the 1974 campaign finance reporting law, however. Lawsuits such as one challenging the constitutionality of the spending limits proscribed under the law will continue to work their way to the state's highest court for adjudication.

Senate passes wide-ranging energy organization bill

By STUART SYMINGTON
U.S. Senator—
Missouri

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Since its creation in 1974, the Federal Energy Administration (FEA) has been the key Federal agency responding to energy problems. Established in the wake of the 1973-1974 oil embargo, the agency was designed to develop plans for dealing with energy production and price problems, advise the President and Congress with respect to national energy policies, develop import and export policies on energy resources, and assemble energy data and information.

However, the FEA was not intended to handle long-term energy programs and was scheduled to go out of existence in June of this year. In a move designed to keep the FEA in operation until a better agency can be developed, the Senate on June 16 passed a bill which would extend the life of the FEA for an additional 15 months.

The problems the FEA has encountered are multiple. It acts as both the promoter and regulator of energy resources. Its role as data collector and data analyst conflicts with its role as the nation's principal energy policy formulator. FEA suffers from overlapping responsibilities shared with other Federal agencies, complexity of regulations, and cumbersome appeals procedures.

The Senate-approved bill would allow the FEA to carry out its responsibilities in the immediate future while plans for a permanent energy organization are being formulated by Congress. Several bills to accomplish this task have already been introduced in the Senate and will be studied in the months ahead.

Several amendments designed to encourage energy conservation practices by Americans in their homes and businesses were also approved.

Malpractice legislation will become law

Missouri's malpractice legislation will become law Aug. 13 after Gov. Bond signed the other five bills that passed the General Assembly this past session.

Bond had earlier signed a bill which precludes the plaintiff in a lawsuit from asking for a specific dollar amount. Lawsuits filed seeking millions in damages often raised false hopes and encouraged more malpractice suits, state officials said.

The major bill in the package is one creating medical malpractice review boards which will review malpractice suits and try to get an out-of-court settlement. Proponents hope malpractice lawsuits can be settled more quickly and thus not cost the insurance company the cost of going to court.

Missouri has not experienced the crisis situation in malpractice insurance that other states have, although prices for such insurance have risen substantially.

Power to regulate truckers is limited

By MARIAN MCDOWELL
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — Although the Public Service Commission (PSC) has increased its investigative staff in response to truckers' complaints about illegal carriers, other limitations will hamper its ability to get at those illegal truckers.

"Truckers feel there is a great deal of illegal transmissions (hauling)," George Burruss, executive vice-president of the Missouri Bus and Truckers Association, said.

The legislature this past session appropriated enough funds to enable the PSC to hire six additional investigators, but it refused to adopt a bill giving investigators the power of arrest. Other problems are low salaries and a resulting high turnover in investigators.

The illegal carrier tries to cut corners where he can by failing to register and meet commission regulations. Regulations commonly abused require truckers to carry insurance, operate on less profitable routes, limit the number of hours a driver may operate and carry out needed maintenance on their truck.

"We have only 19 investigators who must regulate approximately 11,000 registered truckers. I think for the number of people we have and the number of people we are regulating we are doing an outstanding job," Sublett said.

The PSC successfully convinced the General Assembly more funds were needed to increase the investigative staff from 13 to 19 full-time investigators beginning July 1.

The PSC is installing mobile phones in all investigators' cars which will allow investigators on the road to call headquarters in Jefferson City for information on an individual trucker.

Sublett said investigators work about two years and then move on. The investigator's salary, ranging from $9,588 to $12,720, is rather low when contrasted to the average truck driver's salary range of $25,000 to $30,000 a year. He emphasized a salary increase for investigators is badly needed.

The PSC was not able to get a bill passed by the General Assembly to allow investigators the "power of arrest", although 42 other state commissions now have this power.

"The power of arrest is very important to our job because we could make a case in five minutes instead of five days. The investigator could issue a citation to an illegal carrier with the date he is to appear in court," Sublett said.

Burruss said the trucking industry supported the "power of arrest" bill and that he testified in favor of the bill.

"I believe the legislature is generally reluctant to pass any legislation on the 'power of arrest'. Under the present system, a PSC investigator cannot stop a truck operator on the highway without the cooperation of a highway patrolman. The investigator cannot stop the trucker alone," he said.

"The power of arrest gives the investigator the power to stop truckers and issue citations on the spot if necessary," Burruss said.

Burruss believes the PSC is doing an excellent job for the number of people it has. On an average, PSC investigates 12 to 15 cases a month.

A secondary point of cantention is over the use of money which truckers pay for their regulation.

Truckers must purchase a PSC license each year to operate their vehicles on Missouri highways. The license revenue for fiscal year 1975 totalled $1,508,000 which is eposited in the "Highway User Fund" each year.

"This is the truckers' money, and they are paying for their own regulation. PSC only got $950,500 back from the highway fund in 1975," Sublett said.

Burruss said the trucking industry feels the license revenues should be spent on the industry or not collected at all.

Lyle McLaughlin, assistant chief engineer for the Highway Department, said the money is kept in the "Highway User Fund" for highway maintenance and construction.

"The state Constitution says that all state license fees and taxes upon such vehicles must go into this fund. The philosophy through the years has been that those who use the highway should support them," McLaughlin said.

Corps of Engineers to begin second phase to protect waters

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has confirmed that implementation of the second phase of a three-phase program to protect the quality of the waters of the United States against harmful discharges of dredged or fill materials will proceed as scheduled on July 1.

Presently, under Phase I, the Corps' permits involve all coastal waters and contiguous or adjacent wetlands, as well as inland rivers, lakes and streams that are navigable waters of the United States and their contiguous or adjacent wetlands.

Phase II includes all of Phase I and extends the jurisdiction of the Army Engineers to regulate disposal of dredged or fill materials to natural lakes with more than five surface acres, primary tributaries (the main stems of tributaries directly connecting inland navigable waters of the U.S.), and nearby wetlands.

In today's announcement the Corps of Engineers emphasized that it will continue to use moderation and a reasonable approach in the administration and enforcement of the program. General permits which provide blanket authorization for comparable activities with no significant adverse environmental impact in designated areas will be issued as much as possible to make the program more manageable and practical by reducing the number of permits required.

The first phase began last July 25 when the jurisdiction of the Corps of Engineers in this matter was limited to coastal waters, inland navigable waters of the United States and nearby wetland. Last July the Corps also announced the schedule for the second and third phases. The third phase, scheduled to start next year on the first of July.

Games can be aid in teaching metric system

CAPE GIRARDEAU — A modified game of "Old Maid" cards, a "Spin-the-Wheel" game and various types of measuring kits--all these can be easily constructed by the classroom teacher as aids in teaching the metric system to elementary school pupils.

Just to show how easy it is and the type of imagination which can go into these metric system aids, 27 teachers participating in a workshop at Southeast Missouri State University on the metric system for elementary teachers recently exhibited metric measurement projects in the lobby of the University Center.

The projects were constructed by the teachers during a two-week workshop directed by Dr. John E. Young, associate professor of mathematics. Each project is designed for classroom use by elementary teachers at some grade level from kindergarten through ninth grade and is intended to teach or reinforce metric relationships in one of five areas of measurement--length, area, volume, weight, and temperature.

Dr. Young explained that the projects are activities or games which children can play in groups or do individually to acquaint themselves with the principles of metric measurement or for reinforcement of what they've learned in previous lessons. These include card games such as old metric maid, spin-the-wheel games, kits made up of various size measuring cups constructed from coffee cans, and other activities and games with instructions describing the experiences the student will go through.

Although measurements in science and medicine have been metricized for years, it wasn't until recent years that countries in the world such as the United States and England which used the English system decided to switch over to the metric system. England has gone on a 10-year compulsory plan to change over to the metric system, but is falling behind its schedule.

In the United States the changeover is more gradual. Instead of making it compulsory, Congress passed legislation in September 1975 which simply recommended the changeover to the metric system.

This is the second summer for the metric workshop for elementary teachers sponsored by the University. In addition to the projects, the teachers review many of the materials that are available for use in the classroom and gain practical experience using the metric system by measuring playground buildings and other familiar objects.

"Those taking the workshop want to learn the metric system," Dr. Young said.

The Battle of Moores Creek, North Carolina, was the opening engagement of the Revolutionary War in the south, and is often called the Lexington and Concord of the south. Here on Feb. 27, 1776, a force of 1,500 loyalist militia attacked a patriot force of about 1,000 men under Col. James Moore, entrenched on Moores Creek. The patriots turned back the loyalist assault and subsequently captured or dispersed the entire loyalist command. The action bolstered patriot morale and strengthened the movement for independence. The British, moreover, abandoned their plans for conquering the southern colonies and did not resume major operations in the south until late in the war, The World Almanac notes.

Businessmen, educators to discuss training more, better workers

In a series of unique meetings this Summer, Missouri businessmen and educators will discuss how they can cooperate to train more and better workers for the factories and offices of the state.

At 11 "Industry-Education Conferences," plant managers and personnel directors from small and large businesses all over the state ewill meet with members of the State Board of Education, the area vocational schools, junior colleges and the Division of Commerce and Industrial Development.

"The Department of Education has worked closely in the past with the Division of Commerce and Industrial Development and local development groups in providing educational services to new or expanding industries in Missouri," said B. W. Robinson, assistant commissioner of career and adult education for the Department.

"Local high schools, area vocational schools and junior colleges have provided many kinds of training programs for businesses in Missouri. The goal of these conferences is to expand and improve those services," Robinson said.

Three ways in which business and education can work together will be discussed at the meetings. One involves training for a comon skill. For example, several companies in a region might need maintenance workers or clerical personnel. One program to serve all the firms could be organized in a local school.

Another type of program is "tailor-made" to meet the training needs of one company in a specific skill. This kind of training is often organized when a firm expends, begins production of a new item or adds a new industrial process.

The third avenue is for businesses to communicate and work with nearby high schools, vocational schools and junior colleges. If, for example, exiisting programs in the schools do not meet industry needs, a firm can suggest new programor curricula through an advisory committee.

Approximately 150 representatives of business and industry have been invited to participate in each of the 11 meetings.

The schedule for the conferences, all of which begin at 10:30 a.m. and end at 2 p.m., is as follows: July 8, area vocational school, Sikeston.

Reports are held from FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has blocked FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley from receiving investigative reports on a probe of FBI burglaries, according to a knowledgeable source.

The department official in charge of the investigation has hand-picked a team of 12 FBI agents to do much of the legwork in the case, this source and others familiar with the developments said Tuesday.

The agents' reports may have been sent to Kelley and one of his top assistants, James Adams, early in the investigation, the sources said. But that was changed on orders from department officials and agents no longer are allowed to report their findings to Kelley or Adams, the source said.

It is unusual for the FBI director to be sealed off from reports of his own agents even in investigations involving alleged FBI wrongdoing. It could not be determined why department officials took such action. But the probe is being conducted in even tighter secrecy than usual, and few department officials have been told about the details.

The investigation centers on allegations that FBI agents carried out burglaries at the homes or offices of Americans during the last five years. It is not known how many burglaries might be involved.

Sources said the investigation involves possible criminal charges that FBI men violated the civil rights of citizens in the break-ins.

The department probe is under the over-all direction of Asst. Atty. Gen. J. Stanley Pottinger, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division.

"I've seen Stan shake his head in dismay at what they've found," a department official remarked.

In a development related to the probe, Assistant FBI Director Andrew Decker has hired a well-known Washington attorney, Edward Bennett Williams, to represent him, sources said.

Decker was assigned to intelligence and security matters for several years before Kelley appointed him assistant director for the computer systems division in 1974. He is now in charge of the records division.

One source familiar with the case said Kelley is concerned that the burglary investigation raises doubts about his credibility and control of the bureau.

Kelley has insisted for the past year that FBI burglaries against domestic targets ended in 1966, long before he took office in 1973.

But the department now is investigating burglaries conducted since 1971. Published reports have indicated that some of the burglaries took place after Kelley took office.

If the burglaries were conducted without Kelley's knowledge — and there's no publicly available evidence to the contrary — that raises questions about the strength of the director's leadership.

The FBI refuses comment on the case.

NEW YORK (AP) — Special cards that combine a Mother's Day greeting with a contribution to destitute mothers and their families overseas are being offered by CARE, according to Frank L. Goffio, executive director of the overseas aid and development agency.

"Simply send a contribution — minimum $2 per name — to Mother's Day Plan, CARE, 660 First Ave., New York, N. Y. 10016, or any regional CARE office," Goffio said. "The person designated to receive the greeting will be sent an attractive CARE card notifying her of your special tribute, or the card can be mailed directly to you if you prefer."

He was a member of the Agriculture Club, Block and Bridle Club and National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association.

Mrs. Gary Stallings to head local Breath of Life campaign

"Litt' more than a decade ago th' Cystic Fibrosis Foundatior was working to keep CF youngsters alive long enough to start school. Now, because of the increased life expectancy, we're trying to help some of these same patients, who have grown to young adulthood, enter college or find jobs."

These encouraging words came from RAdio-TV personality Jack Buck, chairman of the Gateway Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, as he appointed Mrs. Gary Stallings chairman o the Sikeston Breath of Life Campaign.

This year's campaign in Sikeston, according to Mrs. Stallings, begins with a door-to-door march this fall.

Among the programs of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation are support for over 100 Cystic Fibrosis centers across the nation. "These centers provide diagnosis, treatment and referral to children who have these lung damaging diseases," the campaign chairperson said.

The foundation also funds research to find a cure and control for cystic fibrosis, the most serious of these lung-damaging diseases, and to develop better treatments for children suffering from all lung disorders.

Cystic fibrosis is the number one genetic killer of children, affecting one out of every 1,500 babies born each year and occurring when a child inherits two genes for the disease, one from each parent.

"We don't need more reasons than these to actively support the Breath of Life Caampaign," said Mrs. Gary Stallings.

Authorities are seeking fraudulent claim holders

JEFFERSON CITY— Local prosecuting authorities have become more aggressive in cases of Missourians who have collected unemployment compensation benefits illegally, the state Department of Labor and Industrial Relations (DOLIR) said today.

The department said convictions were obtained in Magistrate Courts in Douglas County and in Wayne County.

Virgil Richter, Sr., Piedmont, charged on seven counts of fraud, entered a plea of guilty to an amended charge of stealing less than $50. Richter was placed under probation supervision for a period of two years under the condition that he make restitution to the Division of Employment Security in the amount of $523.

Albert Timms of Drury, convicted on 14 counts of fraud, was sentenced to three month's imprisonment. Sentence was suspended on condition of payment of a $700 fine and restitution in the amount of $582.

Through the first six months of this year, the division has presented 473 cases to local authorities for prosecution, and "there have been already, several successful prosecutions in the last few months," according to John F. Meystrik, director of the Division of Employment Security.

Fraudulent claims for unemployment insurance constitute a misdemeanor punishable by fine, imprisonment, or both.

Hearings are scheduled on Symington wilderness bill

WASHINGTON, D.C.— Congressman Jim Symington announced that the Public Lands Subcommittee of the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs will hold hearings on H.R. 12821 a bill he introduced last March which authorizes the federal government to study four wilderness areas in Missouri for possible inclusion in the National Wilderness System.

The four areas include Bell Mountain in Iron and Reynolds counties; Rock Pile Mountain in Madison County; Paddy Creek in Texas County; and Piney Creek in Barry and Stone counties.

"We're on our way to finally preserving some of Missouri's beautiful wilderness areas, and I couldn't be more pleased," said Symington. Yesterday, Symington introduced a bill which will designate Hercules Glades in Taney County as an "instant" wilderness area. He has asked the subcommittee for consideration of this area as well.

H.R. 12821 and identical legislation introduced in the Senate by Senators Symington and Eagleton are the result of more than a year of substantial negotiations and compromise on the parts of the various Missouri Members of Congress and the local communities which they serve. This legislation now represents the agreement of the many varied interests involved, and it has the support of Congressmen Ichord, Burlison, Taylor and Bolling.

Symington had written a letter to Congressman John Melcher, chairman of the Public Lands Subcommittee urging early consideration on this legislation.

Perform to 'Bonnie-n-Clyde'

Authorities are seeking fraudulent claim holders

JEFFERSON CITY— Local prosecuting authorities have become more aggressive in cases of Missourians who have collected unemployment compensation benefits illegally, the state Department of Labor and Industrial Relations (DOLIR) said today.

The department said convictions were obtained in Magistrate Courts in Douglas County and in Wayne County.

Virgil Richter, Sr., Piedmont, charged on seven counts of fraud, entered a plea of guilty to an amended charge of stealing less than $50. Richter was placed under probation supervision for a period of two years under the condition that he make restitution to the Division of Employment Security in the amount of $523.

Albert Timms of Drury, convicted on 14 counts of fraud, was sentenced to three month's imprisonment. Sentence was suspended on condition of payment of a $700 fine and restitution in the amount of $582.

Through the first six months of this year, the division has presented 473 cases to local authorities for prosecution, and "there have been already, several successful prosecutions in the last few months," according to John F. Meystrik, director of the Division of Employment Security.

Fraudulent claims for unemployment insurance constitute a misdemeanor punishable by fine, imprisonment, or both.

Hearings are scheduled on Symington wilderness bill

WASHINGTON, D.C.— Congressman Jim Symington announced that the Public Lands Subcommittee of the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs will hold hearings on H.R. 12821 a bill he introduced last March which authorizes the federal government to study four wilderness areas in Missouri for possible inclusion in the National Wilderness System.

The four areas include Bell Mountain in Iron and Reynolds counties; Rock Pile Mountain in Madison County; Paddy Creek in Texas County; and Piney Creek in Barry and Stone counties.

"We're on our way to finally preserving some of Missouri's beautiful wilderness areas, and I couldn't be more pleased," said Symington. Yesterday, Symington introduced a bill which will designate Hercules Glades in Taney County as an "instant" wilderness area. He has asked the subcommittee for consideration of this area as well.

H.R. 12821 and identical legislation introduced in the Senate by Senators Symington and Eagleton are the result of more than a year of substantial negotiations and compromise on the parts of the various Missouri Members of Congress and the local communities which they serve. This legislation now represents the agreement of the many varied interests involved, and it has the support of Congressmen Ichord, Burlison, Taylor and Bolling.

Symington had written a letter to Congressman John Melcher, chairman of the Public Lands Subcommittee urging early consideration on this legislation.
